

1 REPORT OF THE AD INTERIM COMMITTEE ON
 2 WOMEN SERVING IN THE MINISTRY OF THE CHURCH
 3 TO THE FORTY-FIFTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY
 4 OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN AMERICA

5
 6 [Editorial Note: Greek and Hebrew fonts corrected. Marginal bullets indicate the only other
 7 corrections.]

8 9 CHAPTER ONE
 10 INTRODUCTION

11
 12 The Presbyterian Church in America is joyfully and confessionally committed to the Bible's
 13 teaching on the complementarity of men and women. As a denomination, we believe that 14 this teaching is true, good, and beautiful. We affirm the full dignity of men and women as 15 created in the image of God (Gen. 1:26-28). We also humbly and happily embrace Scripture's
 16 clear teaching that the eldership is to be composed of qualified men (1 Tim. 2:12; 3:1-7;
 17 5:17), who are entrusted by Christ with the ministry of the authoritative teaching and ruling
 18 of the church for the building up of the whole body (Eph. 4:11-13). In marriage, this 19 mutually-edifying complementarity is displayed when a Christian husband expresses his 20 responsibility of headship in sacrificial love to his wife (Eph. 5:23-31) and when a Christian 21 wife welcomes her husband's headship with respect (Eph. 5:22-24, 33).

22
 23 Within this framework of our common and principled commitment to complementarianism as 24 defined by our confessional standards and polity, the 44th General Assembly of the 25 Presbyterian Church in America approved the formation of a study committee on the issue of 26 women serving in the church's ministry in ways that are consistent with those standards. The 27 General Assembly directed the moderator to appoint a committee of competent men and 28 women who represent the diversity of opinions within the PCA. This diversity of opinions
 29 refers not to the inclusion of views out of accord with our confessional position but regards a 30 number of subsidiary matters such as the role of women in diaconal ministry; the best way to 31 promote the use of women's gifts and ministry in the church; in what settings is it appropriate
 32 for women to teach; whether deacons ought to be ordained; what the nature of the diaconal
 33 office is; whether women may serve on denominational boards and agencies, and the like.

34
 35 For instance, consider the question of women's role in diaconal ministry. All sides are 36 agreed that there is biblical warrant for the involvement of women in the church's diaconal
 37 work. Our Book of Church Order already allows for and encourages that (BCO 9-7). Indeed,
 38 women have been involved in the diaconal ministry of the church with apostolic benediction
 39 and encouragement from the beginning (1 Tim. 5:10). The question is, how? And, is there an 40 appropriate title for this work? That is one place where there is a diversity of opinions in the 41 PCA. Our BCO says: "To the office of deacon, which is spiritual in nature, shall be chosen
 42 men of spiritual character, honest repute, exemplary lives, brotherly spirit, warm sympathies, 43 and sound judgment." Many embrace this view as their personal conviction. Some in our 44 denomination believe that the office of deacon should be open to women, and thus that 45 women should be ordained as deacons (and this would require a Book of Church Order

1 change). Others favor a distinctive ordained office of deaconess (which would also require a
2 BCO change), while some simply view deaconess as the title for a qualified, unordained
3 woman who assists the officers of the church in their work. Still, others have installed an 4 unordained diaconate made up of men and women (a disputed practice in our denomination).
5

6 Into these diverse opinions and out of a desire to promote the peace, purity, unity, and 7 progress of the church, the 44th General Assembly directed this committee to give particular 8 attention to the issues of:
9

- 10 1. The biblical basis, theology, history, nature, and authority of ordination,
- 11 2. The biblical nature and function of the office of deacon,
- 12 3. Clarification on the ordination or commissioning of deacons/deaconesses, and
- 13 4. Should the findings of the study committee warrant BCO changes, the study committee 14 will propose such changes for the GA to consider.
- 15 5. Compose a Pastoral Letter to be approved by the General Assembly and to be sent to all 16 churches, encouraging them [within the parameters of our doctrinal standards] to:
17
 - 18 (1) promote the practice of women in ministry,
 - 19 (2) appoint women to serve alongside elders and deacons in the pastoral work of the 20 church, and
 - 21 (3) hire women on church staff in appropriate ministries.

22
23 In fulfilling the assignment given to the committee, our unanimous aim is not to undermine
24 or alter our confessional commitments, but rather to foster a robust complementarian position
25 and practice that creates a culture which welcomes and encourages the ministry of women in 26 the PCA in ways that are consistent with the Bible's teaching, as expressed in our confession
27 and polity. The moderator appointed seven voting members and six advisory members (five 28 of whom were able to serve) to our committee. All members unreservedly embrace our 29 denominational standards' affirmation of complementarianism in the home and church.
30

31 Committee members met numerous times during the year, face-to-face and electronically,
32 supplemented by a continuous correspondence on matters of discussion and dispute, as well
33 as about the content of our report. We debated all the matters put to us by the General
34 Assembly and were, by the grace of God, able to arrive at an overwhelming consensus.
35

36 We present our report to you in five chapters:
37

- 38 1 Introduction (including our response to Overture 3)
- 39 2. A Biblical Foundation for the Roles of Women in the Church
- 40 3. Ordination - A Definition, with Special Reference to the Office of the Diaconate
- 41 4. Encouraging a Robust and Gracious Complementarian Practice
- 42 5. Pastoral Letter and Recommendations

43
44 The committee is not recommending any Book of Church Order changes. We do offer some 45 prudential recommendations to sessions and presbyteries, and we suggest an overture that 46 could be made by a presbytery, if one so desired. We have sought to make recommendations

1 that accord with the clear teaching of Scripture and our denomination's doctrinal standards,
 2 and that serve the interests of the church's unity.

3
 4 We believe that the matters the General Assembly asked us to study are timely and needed.
 5 Along with our confessional complementarian convictions, we want to champion the 6 dignity, ability, and service of women in the church. It is important that we do both.

7
 8 When the PCA was formed, objection to the ordination of women as pastors and elders was 9 an animating issue. We agreed upon it and rallied around it (all of us, men and women),
 10 because we rightly saw that it was an issue of biblical authority. Today, that commitment
 11 remains dominantly embraced in the membership of the PCA, but both members and ministers 12 are asking how to equip, encourage, and utilize women in the church's ministry in ways that 13 are consistent with our confessional and theological commitments to complementarianism.

14
 15 When the PCA began, North American society was in flux on the issue of women's roles.
 16 Today, the society is settled on the full inclusion of women in every sphere. This presents us
 17 with a challenge and opportunity. In this moment, we need positively and persuasively to 18 make the case for biblical complementarity in the home and church, showing that it is true,
 19 good, and beautiful. At the same time, we want actively and unhesitatingly to pursue and 20 equip the women of the church for every biblical role of service open to them. This then is 21 the aspiration of the report we offer.

22
 23 Study Committee on the Role of Women in the Ministry of the Church:

- 24 TE Leon Brown (Advisory Member)
- 25 TE William Castro (Advisory Member)
- 26 TE Jeffrey Choi (Voting Member)
- 27 TE Dan Doriani (Advisory Member)
- 28 TE Ligon Duncan (Voting Member)
- 29 TE Irwyn Ince (Voting Member)
- 30 Mrs. Lani Jones (Advisory Member)
- 31 Mrs. Kathy Keller (Voting Member)
- 32 Mrs. Mary Beth McGreevy (Voting Member)
- 33 TE Bruce O'Neil (Voting Member)
- 34 TE Harry Reeder (Voting Member)
- 35 TE Roy Taylor (Advisory Member)

36
 37 Response to Overture 3

38
 39 Overture 3 from Westminster Presbytery calls on the Assembly to "Declare that the 44th
 40 General Assembly Erred in the Formation of an Ad Interim Committee on Women, that the 41 General Assembly not Receive the Report of the Ad Interim Committee on the Role of 42 Women as not Being Properly before the Court, and Dismiss the Ad Interim Committee with 43 Apology."

44
 45 The Rules of Assembly Operations (RAO) 11-5 directs the Stated Clerk on where to refer
 46 overtures. RAO 11-5 specifically states that "Any overture, other than an overture proposing

1 amendment to the Constitution, having to do with the nature or responsibilities of a
2 permanent Committee or Agency shall be referred by the Clerk to the appropriate
3 Committee or Agency or ad interim committee.”

4
5 It should be noted that in 2000, Westminster Presbytery sent an overture (Overture 20)
6 regarding Covenant College (CC) and asked that it be referred to the Overtures Committee
7 (M28GA, 2000, p. 252). The Stated Clerk reported to the Assembly that he had referred
8 Overture 20 to CC (M28GA, 2000, p. 51). The Moderator of the Twenty-eighth General
9 Assembly, TE Morton H. Smith, did not rule the Stated Clerk's reference to CC to be out of 10 order. The Stated Clerk did not refer it to the Overtures Committee; he referred it to the 11 Board of Trustees of Covenant College (CCB), which in turn sent it with their 12 recommendation to the Committee of Commissioners on Covenant College (CC CoC), 13 which in turn reported it to the General Assembly. The CC CoC asked the opinion of the 14 CCB as to whether it was in order for the CC CoC to consider Overture 20. The CCB replied
15 that, in their opinion it was in order (M28GA, 2000, p. 249). There was no point of order
16 raised from the floor at the time of the CC CoC report (perhaps due to the CCB opinion).
17 The CCB, the CC CoC, and the Assembly answered Overture 20 in the negative (M28GA, 18 2000, pp. 250-252). Under the provisions of RAO 11-5, in keeping with past practices on 19 reference of overtures, and in keeping with the previous constitutional advice of the CCB,
20 this ad interim committee was, in fact, the proper place to which to refer Overture 3.

21
22 The ad interim committee is recommending to the General Assembly that Overture 3 be 23 answered in the negative (see recommendations section of this report) and offers the 24 following grounds for our recommendation:

25
26 The assertion that the formation of the ad interim committee originated with the Cooperative
27 Ministries Committee (CMC) and was therefore out of order (Whereas section 2) was dealt 28 with at the 44th General Assembly.

29
30 TE David Coffin raised a point of order that Recommendation 3 was not 31 properly before the Assembly for consideration because the matter at hand did
32 not fall within the limits of the Cooperative Ministries Committee's 33 responsibilities (RAO 7-3) nor did the Administrative Committee have subject
34 matter jurisdiction. The Moderator ruled the point of order not well taken,
35 stating that the Permanent Committee Recommendation was in order and that 36 the CMC had acted properly and referred the matter appropriately. The ruling
37 was appealed, and the Moderator's ruling was sustained (582-466-36)
38 (M44thGA, 2016, p. 51).

39
40 The presupposition of Whereas section 2 that requests for ad interim committees must arise
41 from presbyteries is simply erroneous. Moreover, the request was a recommendation of the 42 Administrative Committee (AC) in accordance with RAO 7-3.c.

43
44 The citation of BCO 14-1.7 in Whereas section 3 and section 6 is erroneous because any 45 recommendation of an ad interim committee must be approved by the General Assembly. In 46 that way, the Assembly sets policy.

1 The assertion of Whereas section 4 that the appointment of an ad interim committee
 2 violates RAO 11-2 likewise is erroneous. The recommendation of the CMC to the AC was
 3 not a group of individuals who had to go through a session or presbytery. The CMC
 4 correctly followed RAO 7-3.c. in referring the matter to the AC. It was the AC, not the 5 CMC, that brought the recommendation to the Assembly.

6
 7 The assertion of Whereas section 5 that the ad interim committee urges adoption of changes
 8 to the BCO is factually incorrect. The ad interim committee is not proposing any BCO changes
 9 to the General Assembly. The assertion is also procedurally incorrect. An ad interim committee
 10 may propose BCO changes as the Ad Interim Committee to Study and Make Recommendations
 11 as to Structure and Procedure did (M14thGA, 1988, pp. 81; 103-108; 425-448).

12
 13 The assertion of Whereas section 8 that placing women on a General Assembly ad interim
 14 committee is a violation of 1 Timothy 2:12 is erroneous because any recommendation of a 15 committee must be approved by the church court appointing it. Moreover, a related point of 16 order was ruled to be not well taken:

17
 18 TE Wes Reynolds raised a point of order, based on BCO 14-1.9-10, that 19 committees ought to be representative of the presbyteries and therefore the 20 recommendation should be found out of order. The Moderator ruled the point of 21 order not well taken, stating that this reference in the BCO is not applicable to 22 study committees, and that Roberts Rules of Order allows for non-members to 23 be appointed to committees (RONR [11th ed.], p. 174, ll. 31-34; p. 489, ll. 24-25).

24
 25 Additionally, the General Assembly accepted as satisfactory North Georgia Presbytery's
 26 argument to reject an exception taken by the CRPR that it was improper for women to serve 27 as voting members of a Presbytery committee (M23GA, 1995, p.199).

28
 29 The assertion of Whereas section 9 that our culture's attitude concerning women has 30 changed with a repudiation of God's word as the norm is correct in several respects. But it 31 does not logically follow that an appointment of an ad interim committee to study the 32 teaching of the Word is a repudiation of the Word of God.

33
 34 The presupposition of Whereas section 10 that the church is to reform culture and that the 35 church is not to conform to culture is a valid principle, but it does not follow that the 36 establishment of an ad interim committee is conforming to the culture. There have been 37 times in history where the culture has stirred the conscience of the church on such issues as 38 chattel slavery, segregation, and voting rights for women and minorities.

39
 40 The presupposition of the Whereas section 11 that the ad interim committee will propose a 41 change on women in office is factually incorrect. The committee is not making any such 42 proposal.

43
 44 The committee has spent much time and effort in preparing a report for the General
 45 Assembly. The Assembly deserves to hear the results of the committee's labors.

46

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45

CHAPTER TWO
A BIBLICAL FOUNDATION FOR THE ROLES OF WOMEN IN THE CHURCH

The Old Testament, New Testament, and church history provide a robust foundation for the roles of women in the ministry of the church. This chapter exegetes key scripture passages that supply the biblical foundation for the value, dignity, and service of women in Christ's church. It further explores views held by church leaders when appropriate.

A SURVEY OF THE ROLE OF WOMEN IN SCRIPTURE

Women are invaluable assets to Christ's church. From Huldah the prophetess (2 Kgs. 22:14-20) to Mary the theotokos (Luke 2:6-7) and Phoebe a diakonos, co-laborer of the apostle Paul (Rom. 16:1-2), their ministries are breathed into holy writ as examples of faithful service to God and His people. Paul praised women for their assistance as he planted churches. Euodia and Syntyche contended at Paul's side in the cause of the gospel (Phil. 4:2-3). He lauded Mary, Junias, Tryphena, Tryphosa, and Persis for their singular aid (Rom. 16:6-13). Paul commended women for teaching children (2 Tim. 1:5), urged older women to instruct younger women (Titus 2:3-4), and noted their prophetic ability during church services (1 Cor. 11:5). Women have served for thousands of years in Christ's church.

While women maintain significant ministries in the church, they did not fulfill every role. Women occasionally served as judges, prophetesses, and co-laborers alongside church planters, but they were neither apostles (Matt. 10:2-4), nor expected to be monarchs (Deut. 17:14-20; 2 Sam. 7:12-16; cf. 2 Kgs 11). Additionally, God's law dictated that priests were males (Exod. 29:30). Elders in the new covenant church (1 Tim. 3:1-7) and all of the traveling companions Paul mentions in his letters are male: Barnabas, Silas, Luke, Timothy, Titus, John Mark, Epaphras, and Epaphroditus, among others.

Women in ministry carry out important roles, but the biblical text demonstrates that men and women hold distinct, God-given roles in His church. The following section analyzes the various ministries of women throughout the Scriptures. While time does not permit a full citation of everything women do as recorded in Scripture, the list will be extensive enough to reveal patterns and draw implications.

Women Served as Prophetesses

In Exodus 15, Miriam, the sister of Moses and Aaron, is the first Old Testament prophetess. As an older sister, she helped save her brother's life (cf. Exod. 2:4). In adulthood, Miriam emerged in conjunction with her brothers' leading. Miriam praised God for Israel's deliverance from suffering, slavery, and oppression, concluding a terrible history of enslavement and assimilation to worshiping foreign gods.

Through the hand of Moses, the Lord drowned Pharaoh and his army. Then, the people of God responded in great shouts of praise. Moses led the initial part of the worship service

1 (Exod. 15:1-8). Of particular interest is Moses' response in verse 1: "I will sing to the 2 LORD, for he has triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider he has thrown into the sea."
3 In Exodus 15:20, Miriam followed Moses' lead. "Miriam the prophetess, Aaron's sister," 4 replied by taking "a tambourine in her hand and all the women followed her, with 5 tambourines and dancing. Miriam sang to them: 'Sing to the LORD, for he has triumphed
6 gloriously; the horse and his rider he has thrown into the sea'" (Exod. 15:20-21).

7
8 Miriam's words were virtually identical to Moses'. Her purpose was the same as his. Both
9 led Israel in praise to God. Both helped the people respond to a great event in Israel's
10 history. Moses led the victory and its celebration. Miriam stood beside her brother, leading 11 the women in celebration and praise. When Miriam supported Moses, she was effective and 12 blessed.

13
14 In contrast, Numbers 12 says Miriam and Aaron spoke against their brother Moses, asking,
15 "Has the Lord spoken only through Moses? Hasn't he also spoken through us?" (Num. 12:2).
16 God rebuked them verbally and struck Miriam with leprosy for a week, so that she was sent 17 out of the camp for seven days (Num. 12:4-15). When Miriam opposed Moses, she was 18 rebuked.

19
20 Huldah, another prophetess, served God's people at a peculiar point in Israel's history. The 21 newly installed King Josiah was just eight years old (2 Kgs. 21:1-24). He was a godly king
22 who ordered repairs to the temple after it suffered decades of abuse and neglect.
23 Unfortunately, as a young king, Josiah did little to reverse the sins of his father and 24 grandfather. Josiah's grandfather, Manasseh, defiled the temple for fifty-five years, and 25 Josiah's father, Amon, did evil for two more years. However, in the eighteenth year of his 26 reign, Josiah ordered a reform and restoration of the temple (2 Kgs. 22:1-7).

27
28 As the temple repairs proceeded, Hilkiah the high priest discovered the "Book of the Law,"
29 that is, Deuteronomy (2 Kgs. 22:8).¹ Hilkiah delivered it to the king's secretary Shaphan,
30 who read it to the king. As he listened, Josiah became so dismayed at Israel's sins against 31 this law that he tore his robes. Josiah said, "Go and inquire of the Lord for me and for the 32 people... [For] great is the Lord's anger....because our fathers have not obeyed the words of 33 this book" (2 Kgs. 22:9-13). Josiah surmised that the law condemned Israel's misdeeds and 34 threatened God's judgment. Still, he sought a prophet's assessment, or rather a prophetess, 35 named Huldah.

36
37 This occurred during the fifth year of the ministry of the prophet Jeremiah (compare Jer. 1:2 38 and 2 Kgs. 22:3). Although the precise dates are unknown, the prophet Zephaniah was also 39 active around this time (Zeph. 1:1). Nevertheless, Hilkiah and other royal officials sought
40 Huldah to hear the Lord's assessment (2 Kgs. 22:14).

41
42 If Jeremiah and perhaps Zephaniah were available to prophesy, why would the officials
43 consult the prophetess, Huldah? Huldah's husband was a royal official (2 Kgs. 22:14). That 44

¹ The phrase, "the book of the law" is almost a technical term for Deuteronomy in much of the Old Testament.

1 suggests the officials already knew and trusted her. Perhaps Huldah had already declared
2 God's judgment on the sins of Manasseh. If so, she might know if repentance could reverse
3 God's judgment (2 Kgs. 21:10-15).

4
5 These are mere speculations. What is clear is that the king's officials consulted Huldah, who 6 declared God's Word: Israel would suffer punishment for her decades of sin, "according to 7 everything written in the book" (2 Kgs. 22:16-17). Yet, because Josiah humbled himself and 8 wept in penitence, judgment would not befall Israel during his reign (2 Kgs. 22:18-20).

9
10 The outline of this event reveals helpful considerations. When he discovered the law, the 11 high priest took the initiative (2 Kgs. 22:8ff.). The king led the preliminary response (2 Kgs.
12 22:12ff.). The king also made the final decision regarding a course of action (2 Kgs. 23:1ff.).
13 Yet the king and his officials genuinely consulted Huldah. She influenced the course of 14 events. She neither initiated the action, nor determined the action, but she did influence the 15 action.

16
17 At both a high point (i.e., Miriam) and at a low point (i.e., Huldah) in Old Testament history,
18 a prophetess rose to interpret events and lead Israel's response to it.²

19
20 The Bible mentions other prophetesses. Isaiah 8:3 notes a prophetess who bore a son named
21 Maher Shalal Hash Baz. God sent the boy as a sign of God's coming judgment on wicked
22 king Ahaz. Acts 8 says Philip, a leader of the early church, had four daughters who 23 prophesied. Deborah was both a prophetess and a judge. Her significance will be considered
24 later. Sadly, some women joined men in false prophecy. Nehemiah denounces the 25 prophetess Noadiah who joined male prophets in trying to intimidate him (Neh. 6:14), and 26 Ezekiel condemns false prophetesses (Ezek. 13:17-24).

27
28 In the Bible, the great majority of true prophets are male. All sixteen writing prophets, Isaiah 29 to Malachi, were male. Further, all known miracle-working prophets (e.g., Moses, Elijah, 30 and Elisha) were male. These men, with others like John the Baptist, led Israel publicly. Yet
31 a number of women were godly prophetesses.

32 33 Scripture Records How Women Declared Truth and Performed Acts of Service

34
35 While no woman wrote a book of the Bible whose author is stated, the Bible records the 36 words of women and regards them as inspired truth. Since several women served God
37 faithfully as prophetesses, God's people would expect women's words, such as Miriam's
38 song and Huldah's word of judgment, to be recorded in Scripture. The words of women
39 became Scripture on other occasions, too. These include the outstanding prayer of Hannah
40 (1 Sam. 2:1-10) and the great speech of Abigail to David in 1 Samuel 25:23-31.

² Although not a prophetess, Queen Esther is worthy of mention. She resembles Huldah, for she, too, persuaded a king to take proper action. Her king was the pagan Ahasuerus, but she presented the truth wisely, to move him to do justice and preserve Israel in a desperate hour (Esther 4-8).

1 Priscilla's ministry of correction is somewhat like Abigail's. Priscilla and Aquila were a
 2 husband-wife team who labored with Paul occasionally for years (Acts 18:2-19; Rom. 16:3-3 5). They hosted a house church in Rome and Corinth (Rom. 16:5; 1 Cor. 16:19). These 4 faithful Christians received Apollos, a gifted expositor, but they noted the deficiencies in his 5 preaching. After hearing him, "Priscilla and Aquila invited him into their home and 6 explained to him the way of God more adequately" (Acts 18:26). Just as people puzzle over
 7 the decision to consult Huldah before Jeremiah, they wonder why Acts usually mentions
 8 Priscilla before Aquila. Did she speak more or have greater gifts? Did she have a higher
 9 social status before their marriage?³

10
 11 Why Acts mentions Priscilla first is unknown, but Priscilla and Aquila privately instructed a
 12 leading Christian teacher. Apollos "spoke with great fervor" and "was a learned man with a 13 thorough knowledge of Scripture," but "he only knew the Baptism of John" (Acts 18:24-25).
 14 Hence, when Priscilla and Aquila heard Apollos, they took him into their home and taught
 15 him (Acts 18:26).

16
 17 Since their craft as tent-makers allowed them to travel widely, Priscilla and Aquila assisted 18 Paul in Rome (Rom. 16:3), Corinth (Acts 18:2; 1 Cor. 16:19), and Ephesus (Acts 18:18-26).
 19 Thus, Paul honored Priscilla and Aquila in Romans 16 as fellow workers for whom the 20 whole church gave thanks (Rom 16:3-4).

21
 22 Paul also honored other women in Romans 16, which offers glimpses of the contributions
 23 women made in the early church. Paul had never visited the church in Rome when he wrote
 24 them a letter to prepare for an impending journey to Rome and beyond, but he knew many 25 Christians there and greeted them in chapter 16. The greetings show women functioning as 26 leaders in the church.

27
 28 In Romans 16:1-2, Paul commends Phoebe, a "servant" (NIV, ESV) or "deaconess" (RSV)
 29 of the church.⁴ The Greek term in question, diakonos, ordinarily means a servant or helper, 30 but it can mean deacon. When Paul calls Phoebe a servant, or deacon, of the church in 31 Cenchrea, the close connection of diakonos to a particular person may indicate that she 32 holds an office. However, it could also mean she was very helpful. (Additional clarity will 33 be provided upon examination of 1 Timothy 3 below). Regardless, the phrase servant, or 34 deacon "of the church" suggests that Phoebe had a recognized role in her local congregation.⁵
 35 Clearly, Paul urges the Romans to receive Phoebe with honor, for she helped many.

36
 37 In Romans 16:3, Paul calls Priscilla and Aquila his co-workers. In Romans 16:6, he 38 commended a certain Mary who "worked very hard." In Romans 16:12, Paul mentioned
 39 three women, Tryphaena, Tryphosa, and Persis, who also "worked hard" in the Lord. Paul

³ On social status, James Jeffers, The Greco-Roman World (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 1999), 195.

⁴ The Greek term diakonos-διάκονος can be translated "servant" or "deacon."

⁵ Since there is a feminine form of the noun, the fact that the masculine is here applied to a woman might indicate that an official position is in view. See also C. E. B. Cranfield, A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans (Edinburgh: Clark, 1975-1979), 2:780-783; Douglass Moo, The Epistle to the Romans (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1996), 913-914; Thomas Schreiner, Romans (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1998), 786-787.

1 further mentioned Andronicus and Junias. They were probably married, since Andronicus is
2 a man's name and Junias is a woman's. In a sentence that is difficult to translate, Paul called
3 them prominent either "with" or "among" the apostles (Rom. 16:7).⁶ If "with" is correct,
4 Paul means the apostles held them in high regard. If "among" is correct, he means they are 5 prominent among the people called "apostles."
6

7 Since Junias is a woman's name, some propose that she is a "forgotten" apostle, but Paul did
8 not equate either Andronicus or Junias with the Twelve. Rather, Paul used "apostle" in the 9 less technical, more ordinary, sense of someone selected and sent out for a particular
10 purpose. The Bible called Barnabas (Acts 14:4, 14), Silas (Acts 17:1ff.; cf. 1 Thess. 2:7), 11 Titus (2 Cor. 8:13) and Epaphroditus (Phil. 2:25) apostles in the same sense. The church sent 12 them on missions to spread the gospel. Paul honored Andronicus and Junias for the faithful 13 discharge of vital tasks.
14

15 Examples in the Roles of Women in the Old Testament

16

17 Women neither served as priests nor legitimate monarchs in Israel. Furthermore, they did
18 not preach. However, they did serve as gifted leaders and teachers. Some had an exceptional
19 ability to navigate situations wisely and train others to do the same. Huldah, Zipporah, 20 Miriam, and Esther testify to the God-given talent and leadership ability of women in the 21 Lord's church.
22

23 As mentioned previously, in 2 Kings 22:14-20, Huldah spoke privately to the king's 24 emissaries. Huldah did not go to the court; the court came to her. Hilkiah, Anikam, Achbor, 25 Shaphan, and Asaiah, after arriving at Huldah's domicile, listened intently to the prophecy.
26 Later, these men brought the word of the Lord back to the king for implementation, because 27 he had ultimate authority (2 Kgs. 22:14, 20; 2 Kgs. 23:1-3). Huldah did not decree a course 28 of action, but she proposed the course that king and nation followed.
29

30 Like Huldah, Deborah is a prophetess. She is also a leader or judge of Israel. As a
31 prophetess, Deborah was "leading" (NIV) or "judging" (ESV) Israel.⁷ "She held court...
32 between Ramah and Bethel... and the Israelites came to her to have their disputes decided"
33 (Judg. 4:4-5). The disputes, which required her judgment, were difficult cases, perhaps 34 beyond the ken of local authorities. Deborah apparently dispensed spiritual counsel and 35 issued judgments with legal authority. Interestingly, the Book of Judges never suggests she 36 taught or prophesied in the way that Jeremiah or Isaiah did. That is, she did not deliver 37 sermons or publicly proclaimed oracles from God.
38

39 Perhaps most notable is Deborah's interaction with Barak. When God determined to deliver
40 Israel from Jabin and Sisera, He told Deborah. Through the prophetess, the Lord told Barak
41 to gather a force of 10,000 men for battle, and God would grant victory to Israel. However,
42 Barak was reluctant and refused to go alone. He insisted that Deborah go with him. Despite 43 Barak's reluctance, Deborah did not lead Israel into battle. She consented to go with Barak
44 into battle (Judg. 4:9), but did not lead the troops.

⁶ The Greek preposition "en" [ἐν] may be used either way.

⁷ Hebrew "shaphat" [שָׁפַט] is traditionally translated "judge" but it can mean "lead" as well.

1 Prophets with Limited Authority

2
3 God used many prophets who lacked official, ongoing leadership. The companies of 4 prophets mentioned in 2 Kings had no visible authority. Other prophets simply delivered
5 messages without continuing ministries. In Israel, regular teaching authority resided with the 6 law, not prophecy. Thus, the words of prophets always had to be tested (Deut. 13:1-5; Deut.
7 18:20-22; 1 Cor. 14:29). If a prophecy urged disobedience to God's law, it was false. Death
8 resulted. When God gave the law in Egypt and during Israel's exodus, He required
9 obedience but did not require testing to prove its validity, as He did with prophecy.

10
11 Malachi wrote, "The lips of a priest ought to preserve knowledge, and from his mouth men 12 should receive instruction" (Mal. 2:7). Confirmed in Deuteronomy 33:10, priests and 13 Levites—not prophets—taught God's law. This is further verified in Jeremiah 18:18 and 14 Ezekiel 7:26. The teaching capacity remained with priests, and priests were men. The 15 authoritative function to proclaim God's law, regardless of the audience and whether in 16 public or private, resided in God's revealed will for men to maintain that office. Since 17 prophets did not necessarily have the same responsibilities, that position was open to both 18 women and men. Therefore, while women filled the office of prophetess, they did not hold 19 the permanent, public teaching office of priest.

20
21 Conclusions

22
23 Women instructed men, but often in limited and private settings. They advised and rebuked
24 men, great and small. Women counseled men, who listened and adopted their ideas. They 25 taught and prophesied, giving messages with theological content. Nonetheless, scripture has 26 no example of a woman preaching (cf. 2 Tim. 4:2). Women led beside men in Israel and the 27 church, but no woman held the rank of Abraham, Moses, David, Elijah, Isaiah, Peter, or 28 Paul as a principal leader. In fact, when Miriam aspired to equality with Moses, God
29 rebuked her. When Barak tried to avoid leadership, Deborah urged him to accept it.

30
31 THE ROLES OF WOMEN DURING THE EARTHLY MINISTRY OF JESUS

32
33 Jesus chose twelve male apostles, yet women held vital roles in Jesus' ministry (Luke 1:46-56).
34 Wealthy women not only supported his ministry, but they accompanied Him (Luke 8:1-3).
35 Faithful women remained with Him at His crucifixion (John 19:25-27). Women were the 36 first to witness His resurrection (John 20:1-18) and to carry His instructions to His disciples.
37 A woman witnessed to the goodness of God in Christ to her townsmen (John 4:29).

38
39 As an aside, during His public teaching ministry, Jesus featured women in many of His 40 illustrations and parables: women bake bread (Matt. 13:33), grind grain (Matt. 24:41), wait
41 for a wedding party (Matt. 25:1-10), search for lost money (Luke 15:8-10), pray persistently
42 (Luke 18:1-5), and give whole-heartedly (Luke 21:1-4). Jesus sometimes described His 43 ministry using feminine terms and illustrations (Matt. 23:37; John 16:19-22).

1 Jesus' disregard for Jewish traditions also led Him to associate freely with women. In Luke,
2 for example, Jesus encounters a grieving widow and mother (Luke 7:11-15), lets a sinful
3 woman anoint His feet (Luke 7:36-50), seeks out a long-suffering woman who touched His
4 cloak amidst a throng of people (Luke 8:43-48, cf. 13:10-16), engages a marginalized Samaritan
5 woman at the well (John 4:7-26), and cares about poor women (Luke 2:24, 21:1-4). Going to 6 His crucifixion, Jesus took a moment to address a group of women who mourned His
7 impending death (Luke 23:27-31). Jesus' willingness to ignore custom is part of His resolve
8 to minister to all, regardless of gender, ethnicity, social status, or personal moral history.

9
10 Jesus refused to allow the traditions of men to restrain His ministry to and with women. He
11 never denigrates the service of women in the home, though Jesus does prioritize their roles
12 as His disciples (Luke 10:38-42). There is no conflict between service in the home and 13 discipleship, but sitting at the feet of Jesus to hear His teaching takes priority (cf. Luke 14 11:27-28).

15 THE ROLES OF WOMEN DURING THE APOSTOLIC ERA

16
17
18 Priscilla was a theologically astute disciple. Together with her husband, Aquila, she observed
19 the doctrinal inaccuracy of Apollos' teaching, took him aside, and "explained to him the 20 way of God more accurately" (Acts 18:26). Priscilla's gifts were also utilized alongside and 21 under the authority of the apostle Paul. In fact, she and her husband traveled with Paul
22 during one of his missionary journeys (Acts 18:18-19). Further, Priscilla is among the many 23 faithful and gifted women whom Paul praised for their dedicated work in Romans 16.

24
25 Since women are called to be disciples who faithfully utilize their gifts, how does that affect 26 their service as church members? How can women utilize their gifts to glorify God in the 27 worship and ministry of the church? Can women become church officers (1 Tim. 3:1-13; cf.
28 Acts 6:1-7)? Should they be involved in the liturgy of Sunday service? The following 29 section addresses key passages in the Pauline Epistles concerning women's roles in the 30 church: 1 Corinthians 14, 1 Timothy 2:8-15, Acts 6, and 1 Timothy 3:8-11.

31 1 Corinthians 14:26-40

32
33
34 Christ has ascended and has poured out the Holy Spirit on both men and women, in 35 fulfillment of Joel 2:28-29. God's people are utilizing the good gifts He has given, which 36 extended to corporate worship gatherings. The apostle Paul, in writing to the church at 37 Corinth, encouraged believers to employ their gifts, and to ensure the church is edified, the 38 gifts must operate decently and in order (1 Cor. 14:40). Part of proper order is that women
39 must remain silent, at least for a time (1 Cor. 14:34). How can this be? How can Paul expect
40 women to pray and prophesy (1 Cor. 11:5), expect everyone to offer a hymn, a teaching, a 41 revelation, or an interpretation (1 Cor. 14:26), and yet tell women to remain silent (1 Cor.
42 14:34)?⁸ There are two plausible options.⁹

⁸ Paul says this to the "brothers," but "brothers" includes male and female Christians in his epistles.

⁹ There are four unlikely ways to resolve Paul's apparent contradiction: 1) Paul did contradict himself, saying one thing in 11:5 and another in 14:34. 2) Paul never permitted women to speak in 1 Corinthians 11:5. He

1 Option one maintains there are two kinds of worship in 1 Corinthians 11 and 14. In chapter 11,
 2 women pray and prophesy during private or informal worship in which everyone shared.
 3 Their prophecy may be roughly correlated with what many today call testimony or sharing.
 4 In chapter 14, the worship is more structured. It may be like the synagogue worship (Luke 4;
 5 Acts 13), where one person is invited to bring the main exhortation. A few others may 6 speak, and none of them may be women.

7
 8 This view makes several plausible points: there must be structure within worship services,
 9 and certain leaders would expound the Scriptures. However, it does not adequately
 10 harmonize 1 Corinthians 14:26 and 14:35. How can Paul say that everyone has a hymn or a 11 word in instruction in 1 Corinthians 14:26, then state that women must be silent in 14:35 if 12 there is no qualification or limit on that silence?¹⁰

13
 14 Option two harmonizes 1 Corinthians 14:26 and 14:35 by proposing a limit on the command
 15 of silence in 14:35. Specifically, when Paul says women must remain silent, he means either
 16 silent by not preaching (espoused by Calvin,¹¹ and other older interpreters) or he means 17 silent during the testing of prophecy (espoused by Carson, Grudem, and other more recent 18 interpreters)¹². The testing of prophecy is the theme of 14:29-35. Paul wanted women to use 19 their gifts, but he also wanted all teaching to be tested. That task belonged to elders (or 20 overseers). Close analysis of 1 Corinthians 14 supports the view that women may prophesy
 21 (1 Cor. 11:5) but must remain silent when prophecy is tested (1 Cor. 14:34). Consider
 22 Hurley's observations:¹³

23
 24 Theme (14:26) When you come together, everything must be done to edify the church.
 25
 26 Issue 1: Tongues The number: Two or at most three should speak.
 27 (14:27-28) Why? To edify the church: Let one interpret. If there is no interpreter, 28 let him keep silent.

merely entertains the possibility; if they spoke and did so without a head covering, it would be a disgrace. 3) 14:34-35 is not from Paul; they are an explanatory note added by an early copyist (Gordon D. Fee, The First Epistle to the Corinthians, rev. ed., The New International Commentary on the New Testament (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 2014), 699-705. 4) 11:5 is a general principle for all churches; 14:34-5 is temporary counsel for Corinth, where women were quite uneducated or unruly. The problems with some of these are obvious. For detailed critique of these views, see the exhaustive work of D. A. Carson, "Silent in the Churches: On the Role of Women in I Corinthians 14:33b-36," in Recovering Biblical Manhood and Womanhood: A Response to Evangelical Feminism, eds. John Piper and Wayne Grudem (Wheaton: Crossway 1991); and Anthony Thiselton, The First Epistle to the Corinthians, The New International Greek Testament Commentary (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 2000), 1150-8.

¹⁰ Someone might object that option 1 requires "prophecy" to have one sense in 11:5 – informal sharing – and another in 14:26 – formal instruction. But the term "prophecy" had a wide range of meanings in Greek and Biblical literature, so it could well have two different meanings when used several chapters apart.

¹¹ If the woman is under subjection, she is, consequently, prohibited from authority to teach in public." John Calvin, 1 Corinthians, 2 Corinthians (1 Corinthians 14:34), trans. John Pringle, Calvin's Commentaries, vol. 20 (Grand Rapids: Baker, 2003), 468.

¹² Carson, "Silent in the Churches"; Wayne Grudem, The Gift of Prophecy in 1 Corinthians (Washington: University Press of America, 1982), 245-255.

¹³ James Hurley, Man and Woman in Biblical Perspective (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1981), 188-189.

| | | |
|----|--------------------|---|
| 1 | Issue 2a: Prophecy | The number revisited: Two or three prophets should speak. |
| 2 | (14:29) | Why? To edify the church: Let the others weigh what is said. |
| 3 | | |
| 4 | Issue 2b: | Additional note on the number that prophesy. |
| 5 | (14:30-33a) | On speaking: If a revelation is made to one, let the first be silent. |
| 6 | | You can prophesy one by one. |
| 7 | The goal | Everyone will be instructed and encouraged. |
| 8 | Reason 1 | The spirits of prophets are subject to the control of prophets. |
| 9 | Reason 2 | God is not a God of disorder but of peace. |
| 10 | | |
| 11 | Issue 2c: | Additional note on the weighing of prophecy (14:33b-35) |
| 12 | On weighing | As in all congregations, women should remain silent. |
| 13 | On woman' silence | They are not allowed to speak, but must be in submission. If they |
| 14 | | want to inquire, they should ask their husbands at home. |
| 15 | Reason | For it is disgraceful for a woman to speak in the church. |
| 16 | | |

17 This outline shows how the silence of women applies to the weighing of prophecies. When 18 leaders sift prophecy, then women must “be in submission, as the Law says” (1 Cor. 14:35).
19 “The Law” Paul cites in 14:35 may be God’s will, given at creation, that Adam must lead
20 Eve. If women wish to inquire about the testing, they may ask at home; they must be silent
21 during the testing itself (1 Cor. 14:35-36). This is the order “in all the congregations of the 22 saints” (1 Cor. 14:33b). If anyone disagrees, Paul notes ironically, they must think God has 23 spoken to them alone, because every church does it his way, or rather, that this is how it is to 24 be done in all the churches (1 Cor. 14:36-38).

25
26 The term Paul chooses for silence suggests the women's silence is not absolute. Greek words
27 for silence overlap, and share many similarities. However, Paul uses the word, sigao –
28 σιγάω, which rarely means total speechlessness. It can mean to keep something to oneself
29 (Luke 9:36), to listen (Acts 15:12), or to be silent after speaking (Luke 20:26; Acts 15:13).
30 The word appears in 1 Corinthians 14:28, 14:30, 14:34. In Corinthians 14:28, Paul said that
31 if someone who is speaking in tongues has no interpreter, they should be silent (sigao) –
32 temporarily stop speaking. In verse 30, the apostle said that if one prophet is speaking and 33 something is revealed to another, the first should be silent (sigao) – temporarily stop
34 speaking. Lastly, in verse 34, while prophecy is tested, Paul required that women should 35 temporarily stop speaking. Outside the testing, women may pray, prophesy, sing, and 36 provide a lesson (1 Cor. 14:26).

37 38 Additional Considerations

39
40 Some may ask why Paul let women prophesy but not test prophecy. Prophets like Moses,
41 Samuel, and Isaiah were prophets and authority figures. With this conception of prophet, it
42 seems Paul gave women high authority when he let them prophesy. However, many 43 prophets were outsiders, prone to appear on occasion without ongoing office or formalized
44 training (1 Kgs. 17:1; 1 Kgs. 18:12). They were voices in the wilderness, some lacking
45 official, ongoing leadership. Elijah, Elisha, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, and John the Baptist

1 were ignored or abused, not honored (Matt. 23:29-37).¹⁴ Priests were the regular, authoritative
 2 teachers (Lev. 10:11; Deut. 21:5; 33:10; Mal. 2:6-7).

3
 4 Furthermore, apostles and elders, not prophets, are the primary authorities in the New 5 Testament. Prophets were God's principal spokesmen in the old covenant, but apostles are 6 the principal spokesmen in the new. For example, in Acts 15, apostles and elders determined
 7 the proper response to a theological crisis; then they deputized prophets to carry the message
 8 (Acts 15:2-6, 22-32). Paul also subordinated prophets to himself, which indicates apostles
 9 outranked prophets (1 Corinthians 14:37-38). Moreover, Paul assumed elders, not prophets,
 10 would succeed the apostles when they die (1 Tim. 3; Titus 1).¹⁵ Therefore, prophets do not
 11 bear primary authority in the church.

12
 13 Concerning 1 Corinthians 14, there are two dangers. First, there may be chaos if several 14 prophets spoke at once or if someone speaks in a tongue but has no interpreter (1 Cor.
 15 14:27-28). Second, false teaching may go unchecked if someone erroneously claims to 16 speak at God's direction. To prevent chaos, Paul commends self-control. The Corinthians
 17 must stifle an impulse to speak if another is already speaking or if there is a tongue but no
 18 interpreter. Each must speak in turn. Even so, there must be no more than two or three 19 tongues (1 Cor. 14:27-8) and no more than three prophecies for a session (1 Cor. 14:30-33).

20
 21 To prevent false teaching, "the others should weigh carefully" what the prophets say, for not 22 everyone who thinks he speaks God's word does so (1 Cor. 14:29). It is necessary to weigh 23 or sift speeches that claim to come from God.

24
 25 Who are "the others" who test prophecy? They could be other prophets, but that is unlikely.
 26 First, Greek writers would use the term "the rest" [of the prophets], not "the others" if they 27 wanted to say the remaining prophets do the testing. Second, the gift of discernment is 28 separate from prophecy (1 Cor. 12:10). Third, God appointed teachers to evaluate prophetic
 29 words delivered to the church.¹⁶

30
 31 Some may ask why these "others" have the right to test a prophet's speech. The answer is 32 vital to a proper grasp of women's roles. It is necessary to test prophecy because people can 33 falsely claim to speak for God. Moses warned about false prophets (Deut. 13:1-10) and 34 insisted that Israel investigate when they heard of prophets who led the people astray (Deut.
 35 13:14). Prophets might also believe they speak for God yet merely voice their impressions
 36 (1 Kgs. 22:1-37). Believers must test all things (1 Thess. 5:21; 1 John 4:1), for there are
 37 many false prophets (Matt. 7:15; Matt. 24:11, 24; 1 John 4:1; 1 Tim. 4:1). Many teachers
 38 seek only to please men (2 Tim. 4:3).

¹⁴ Some, like Elijah, came and went rapidly. Others, like Jeremiah and Amos, were rejected by Israel's leaders.

¹⁵ More evidence that prophets have limited authority: 1) 1 Corinthians 14 assumes the words of even recognized prophets must be tested. 2) Prophecy cuts such a low profile that Paul must tell the Thessalonians not to hold it in contempt (1 Thess. 5:20). 3) Church leaders such as Tertullian, Origen, Aquinas and Calvin agreed that prophecy must be tested.

¹⁶ D. A. Carson, Showing the Spirit (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1987), 120; Wayne Grudem, The Gift of Prophecy in the New Testament and Today (Westchester, IL: Crossway, 1988), 70-74.

1 Everyone should be discerning (Job 34:2-6; Ps. 19:12; Matt. 16:3; Phil. 1:10; Heb. 5:14), but
 2 elders are especially responsible to guide the church to true doctrine (Acts 15:1-35; Acts
 3 20:17-31). Among elders, some especially “labor in preaching and teaching” (1 Tim. 5:17).
 4 Whether they label them pastors, teachers, preachers, ministers, or even priests, churches
 5 know God calls some men to proclaim and guard the truth. Paul wanted every church to 6 have men who labor in the Word, teach, and discern (1 Cor. 12:10, 28, 29). He appointed
 7 such men—elders—in every church (Acts 14:23) and told church planters to do the same
 8 (Titus 1:5).¹⁷ Thus it is fitting for women to prophesy but neither to preach nor to test 9 prophecy.

10
 11 1 Timothy 2:8-15¹⁸

12
 13 The apostle Paul stated his purpose in writing Timothy in 1 Timothy 3:14-15: “I am writing
 14 these things to you so that, if I delay, you may know how one ought to behave in the 15 household of God, which is the church of the living God, a pillar and buttress of the truth.”
 16 One may examine Paul’s thesis under several categories: pure doctrine and good conduct
 17 (1 Tim. 1:4-5, 18; 1 Tim. 2:8, 11-15), proper gender relations in the church (1 Tim. 2:9-15; 18 1 Tim. 5:1-16), and proper leadership in the church (1 Tim. 3:1-13). There are reasons to 19 believe 1 Timothy 2:9-15 especially guides believers who gather for worship.¹⁹ Hence, the 20 church faces threats of heresy by standing firm in the gospel, maintaining good conduct,
 21 retaining proper gender roles, and following qualified leaders, especially in worship.

¹⁷ On priests and elders, see John E. Johnson, “The Old Testament Offices as Paradigm for Pastoral Identity,” Bibliotheca Sacra 152 (April-June 1995): 193-196; Peter Leithart, “Attendants of Yahweh’s House: Priesthood in the Old Testament,” Journal for the Study of the Old Testament 85 (1999): 3-24, especially 22-3; Robert S. Rayburn, “Three offices: Minister, Elder, Deacon,” Presbyterion 12 (1986): 108-110; Paul Schrieber, “Priests among priests,” Concordia Journal 14, no. 3 (July 1988): 215-227; Raymond Brown, Priest and Bishop (New York: Paulist Press, 1970), 10-20.

¹⁸ Strong feminist interpretations of our passage include Keener, Paul, Women and Wives: Marriage and Women’s Ministry in the Letters of Paul (Peabody, MA: Hendrickson, 1992), 101-132; I. H. Marshall, The Pastoral Epistles (Edinburgh: T & T Clark, 1999), 436-71. Among traditionalists, see Douglass Moo, “What Does It Mean Not to Teach or Have Authority Over Men: 1 Timothy 2:11-15,” in Recovering Biblical Manhood and Womanhood, eds. John Piper and Wayne Grudem (Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 1991), 179-193; William D. Mounce, Pastoral Epistles (Nashville: Thomas Nelson, 2000), 94-149; Thomas R. Schreiner, “An Interpretation of 1 Timothy 2:9-15: A Dialogue with Scholarship” in Women in the Church: A Fresh Analysis of 1 Timothy 2:9-15, eds. Andreas Kostenberger, Thomas R. Schreiner, and H. Scott Baldwin (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker, 1995), 105-154.

¹⁹ The rationale: 1) The topic and mode of prayer fit worship. They pray for authorities and “lift holy hands” (2:1-4, 8). 2) 2:8 says men should pray (literally) “in every place.” “In every place” means “places of worship” in 1 Cor 1:2, 2 Cor 2:14, 1 Thess 1:8). “The place” is also a circumlocution for God’s temple in the gospels (Matt 24:15, John 4:20, 11:48). 3) Paul says males should pray, not using the word for mankind (anthropos – ἄνθρωπος), but the one for adult males (aner – ἀνήρ), and we know men normally led in prayer in Jewish worship (J. N. D. Kelly, The Pastoral Epistles (London: Adam and Charles Black, 1963), 65; Keener, Paul, Women and Wives, 126, note 67). 4) The modest apparel of women fits worship, since prominent Greco-Roman women displayed their social status with costly clothes and elaborate coiffures. 5) The command that women learn in silence fits worship, since women may speak at home or in private meetings (1 Cor 14:34).

1 1 Timothy 2:9-10 – Apparel

2
3 “I want women²⁰ to dress modestly, with decency and propriety, not with braided hair or 4 gold or pearls or expensive clothes, but with good deeds, appropriate for women who
5 profess to worship God.”

6
7 “I want women to dress modestly” indicates women should adorn themselves with good
8 deeds, not immodest clothes.²¹ Expensive clothes might display a high social rank or a
9 desire to rise in status. Greeks and Jews also viewed extravagant dress as a sign of 10 promiscuity and disregard of a husband's authority.²² In the early church, “the rejection of 11 external adornment was part of a woman's submission to her husband and a recognition of 12 her place among men in general,” but ostentatious adornment indicated “sexual infidelity
13 and materialistic extravagance.”²³

14
15 Modesty is the principle. When Paul cited braided hair, gold, and pearls, the point is not that 16 pigtailed are sinful, but that elaborate displays of wealth take attention from God who is 17 worshipped and place the attention upon a well-dressed worshiper. If men were prone to 18 disrupt the church through angry disputes, women were prone to disrupt it through physical 19 displays.²⁴

20
21 1 Timothy 2:11-12 – Learning, Submission, and Permission

22
23 “Let a woman learn quietly with all submissiveness. I do not permit a woman to teach or to 24 exercise authority over a man; rather, she is to remain quiet.”

25
26 This passage both liberates and restrains. First century Greek and Jewish cultures generally
27 considered women mentally inferior. They judged women's education a waste of time at best
28 and a cause of temptation at worst. The Mishnah advised men not to talk with women
29 frequently, lest they bring evil on themselves, neglect the law, and inherit damnation. Near 30 Jesus' day, Philo, a Jewish philosopher influenced by Greek thought, said Satan wisely

²⁰ A few scholars believe the Greek term γυνή– gyne, rendered "women" in almost all English translations, should be translated "wives." (Gordon Hugenberger, "Women in Church Office: Hermeneutics or Exegesis? A Survey of Approaches to 1 Timothy 2:8-15," Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 35 (1992: 341-60.) Greek does use the same word for women and wives, but "women" seems right since 1) When Paul wants γυνή– gyne to indicate a wife, he mentions marriage or their husbands in the context; 2) Paul would hardly forbid wives to dress ostentatiously, but permit single women to do so. See Schreiner, "An Interpretation of 1 Timothy 2:9-15," 115-7.

²¹ "I want" indicates Paul's command, not his mere desire. The Greek means "I counsel," not "I wish." One may call it stereotyping, but Paul warns men about anger (2:1) and warns women about ostentation.

²² After a long complaint about the jewels, makeup, perfumes, and luxuries of women, Juvenal adds, "Meantime she pays no attention to her husband." See Juvenal, "Satire 6" in Juvenal and Persius, trans. C. G. Ramsey (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1965), 121-125.

²³ David Scholer, "Women's Adornment: Some Historical and Hermeneutical Observations on the New Testament Passages," Daughters of Sarah 6, no. 1 (1980): 5.

²⁴ Paul does not ban all hair styling, as if tangles signified godliness. Hair braids could be simple. The problem is elaborate, expensive hairstyles. See James Hurley, Man and Woman in Biblical Perspective (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1981); Keener, Paul, Women and Wives, 104-5.

1 attacked Eve through her senses, “For in us mind corresponds to man, the senses to woman.”
2 He also said the masculine soul devotes itself to God the Creator, while the feminine soul
3 attends to things created.²⁵ Paul believed otherwise. He did not acquire Philo’s philosophies
4 neither did he rank the capabilities of one’s soul based on gender. Paul rightly understood
5 that women—image-bearers of God—should learn and be taught.

6
7 Since no one can learn if noisy and insubordinate, it is sensible that Paul would request
8 women to learn quietly, which is an indication of their submission. To learn quietly is meant
9 to portray a woman learning in a quiet manner. It does not mean absolute silence.²⁶
10 Submission means that women should accept the doctrine taught by the church leaders (1 11 Tim. 3:2). Quiet and submissive dispositions demonstrate that women respect their teachers 12 and accept biblical doctrine.

13
14 Some say that after women learn enough, they will begin to teach. Some reason that when 15 Paul prohibits women from teaching in 1 Timothy 2:12, it is a temporary ban, which applies
16 only until women are well instructed.²⁷ It is true that women can impart what they know to 17 others, but this line of reasoning often believes well-instructed women should hold the 18 teaching office, as elders or preachers. This view rests in part on a distinctive interpretation
19 of the phrase, "I do not permit" in verse 12.

20
21 Paul's counsel is clear: women may learn, but may not teach or exercise authority over men.
22 Yet, almost every word of verse 12 is contested. Paul sometimes lets women teach men. He 23 permitted female prophets to speak in Corinth and listed female coworkers, who must have 24 said something as they toiled. He declared that all Christians have gifts they must exercise
25 for the common good, knowing one must speak to exercise most gifts. How is Paul's
26 prohibition in 1 Timothy 2:12 reconciled with his permission elsewhere? There are two 27 possibilities: the prohibition may be temporary or it may be partial.

28
29 Egalitarianism suggests the prohibition is temporary. Adherents note that the verb “permit”
30 is in the present tense. Therefore, they say, Paul only prohibited teaching in the present,
31 when women were uneducated. When that was remedied, women could teach. This 32 argument fails in that the next sentence declares why women may not teach. Paul cites the ²⁵ See Philo, "On the Creation" and "The Special Laws," in The Works of Philo, trans. F. H. Colson (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1929 and 1937), 1:131 and 7:581-3, respectively.

²⁶ The term hesuchia – ἡσυχία – can mean total silence, but more often describes a quiet attitude. All the terms for silence and quietness overlap with each other somewhat, but the family of siopao, sigē and sigao – σιωπάω, σιγή, σιγάω - is more likely to denote speechlessness, perhaps by choice (Luke 9:36, Acts 15:13). The term phimoo – φιμώω can mean to be silenced by an order (Mark 1:25, 4:39) by being ashamed (Matt 22:12) or by a refutation (Matt 22:34). Epistomizo – ἐπιστομίζω means to keep someone from speaking (Titus 1:11). We must not exaggerate the difference between these words, but our term seems apt to describe the relative silence that is a virtue for students. See Aida Besançon Spencer, Beyond the Curse: Women Called to Ministry (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker), 75-81.

²⁷ Spencer, Beyond the Curse, 84-6; Keener, Paul, Women and Wives, 109-13; Gilbert Bilezikian, Beyond Sex Roles (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1985), 179.

1 order of creation, not a lack of education. Further, some wealthier women were educated.²⁸
 2 Simply put, if the problem was a lack of education, Paul could have written, “Women may 3 not teach until they are educated.”
 4

5 Complementarianism suggests Paul's prohibition is permanent but partial. Thus, women may
 6 teach privately, informally, and occasionally, as Priscilla and others did, but they should not
 7 present the doctrines of the faith as authoritative church leaders in the assembly of the saints.
 8 This task (e.g., guarding the gospel) occupied Paul's letters to Timothy and was given to 9 elders or overseers who are male and “the husband of one wife” (1 Tim. 3:2; 1 Tim. 6:20; 2
 10 Tim. 1:12-14).²⁹
 11

12 Three factors indicate that Paul forbids only authoritative instruction in doctrine. First, the 13 Bible indicates that women taught. The Scriptures do not, however, describe women
 14 preaching or teaching the assembly of Christians. Second, the context of 1 Timothy is 15 worship in the church. During the corporate gathering, church officers teach bindingly and 16 have been given the task to do so (1 Tim. 3:2). Third and finally, Paul's language suggests 17 that he forbids women to teach doctrine and to exercise ruling authority in the church. That 18 language will now be considered.
 19

20 The verb translated “teach” (διδάσκω - didasko) means to teach or instruct someone, but in 21 Paul's letters, especially 1 Timothy, 2 Timothy, and Titus, what is taught is usually the 22 foundational doctrine of the faith.³⁰ Timothy and Titus were Paul's most trusted pastoral 23 representatives; the three letters to them form a cluster called the Pastoral Epistles. A clear
 24 example of teaching that has doctrine as its content is found in 2 Timothy 2:2: “The things
 25 you have heard me say in the presence of many witnesses entrust to reliable men who will 26 also be qualified to teach others.” Similarly, in Titus 1:9 Paul wrote elders must “hold firm
 27 to the trustworthy word as taught, so that he may be able to give instruction in sound 28 doctrine and also to rebuke those who contradict.”
 29

30 The noun “teaching” is very similar. For example, Paul said that God called believers
 31 through the gospel, to share in the glory of Jesus, then adds, “So then, brothers, stand firm
 32 and hold to the teachings we passed on to you, whether by word of mouth or by letter”
 33 (2 Thess. 2:14-5). The teachings or “traditions” (ESV) are the message of the apostles,
 34 carefully handed down by spoken words and letters (Gal. 1:6-12).

²⁸ Stephen Baugh, “A Foreign World: Ephesus in the First Century” in Women in the Church: A Fresh Analysis of 1 Timothy 2:9-15, eds. Andreas Kostenberger, Thomas R. Schreiner, and H. Scott Baldwin (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1995), 45-47.

²⁹ The terms elder and overseer are interchangeable in Titus 1:5-7 and Acts 20:17, 28.

³⁰ By my estimate, in the fifteen verses that use the verb “teach,” three certainly refer to basic doctrine (1 Cor 4:17, Gal 1:12, 2 Thess 2:15) and six almost certainly do (Rom 12:7; Eph 4:21; Col 1:28, 2:7; 1 Tim 2:12, 4:11), leaving six that refer to other teaching. There are two cognate nouns for teaching, didache – διδαχή and didaskalia – διδασκαλία. The first word, didache, refers to Christian doctrine in four of its six uses in the New Testament (Rom 6:17, 16:17; 2 Tim 4:2 and Titus 1:9, but not 1 Cor 14:6, 26). The second word typically refers to false teaching (Matt 15:9, Mark 7:7, Eph 4:14, Col 2:22, but not Rom 15:4), until we get to the Pastoral Epistles. There Paul specifies if it is sound doctrine or not (1 Tim 1:10). See also o George W Knight III, The Pastoral Epistles, The New International Greek Testament Commentary (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1992), 88-9, 140-1; J. N. D. Kelly, The Pastoral Epistles (London: A & C Black, 1963), 50; Schreiner, “An Interpretation of 1 Timothy 2,” 127-8.

1 Hence, when Paul said, “I do not permit a woman to teach,” he has as his background the 2 doctrines of our most holy religion and the men, specifically, elders who are charged to 3 teach and preach these truths. Those called must be apt to teach and lead exemplary lives,
 4 proving their ability to lead by caring for their wives and children (1 Tim. 3:1-5). Some
 5 elders work hard in the Word, preaching, teaching, and defending the gospel (1 Tim. 5:17).
 6 The point is not that men must do all the teaching or women must never teach men anything.
 7 Rather, Paul wrote that the primary calling of men who are tested, approved, and
 8 consecrated by the church (i.e., elders) must preach, teach, and defend the gospel of Christ
 9 (2 Tim. 2:24-6; cf. Acts 6:2).

10
 11 Paul also says women must not “exercise authority.” The significance of the Greek word 12 (αὐθεντέω - authenteo) is difficult to articulate because it is rare, appearing just once in the 13 New Testament and approximately 100 times in all ancient literature. It sometimes has 14 negative connotations. Some say Paul means women must not “usurp authority over men” or 15 “abuse their authority over men,” but evidence indicates “rule” or “exercise authority” is the 16 best definition.³¹ John Chrysostom says women must not teach men because Eve “once
 17 taught Adam wrongly” and women must not exercise authority over man because “she once
 18 exercised authority wrongly.” When Chrysostom utilized the term, he added “wrongly,” 19 which indicates that he felt the phrase, “exercise authority,” did not, by itself, have a 20 negative force. If authenteo does not intrinsically mean to abuse or usurp authority, then
 21 Paul is forbidding women to rule or govern the church.³²

22
 23 Third, the grammatical structure also points to the translation “exercise authority.” The 24 terms “teach” and “exercise authority” are joined by the Greek conjunction oude (οὐδέ).
 25 Oude is a word that negates. It means “and not,” “neither,” or “nor.” Oude also has an 26 interesting grammatical feature. When it links two verbs, both are bad in themselves or both 27 are good in themselves. It never links a negative and a positive verb.³³ Consider these 28 sentences:
 29

| | |
|---|--|
| You may neither eat your food nor drink your juice until we pray. | “Eat” and “drink” are both positive. They will be linked, in Greek, by oude. |
| Neither steal nor destroy your brother's toys. | “Steal” and “destroy” are both negative. They will be linked, in Greek, by oude. |
| Neither call nor bother me. | “Call” is positive; “bother” is negative. They would not be linked in Greek by oude. |

³¹ See Andreas J. Köstenberger, Thomas R. Schreiner, and H. Scott Baldwin, Women in the Church: A Fresh Analysis of 1 Timothy 2:9-15 (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1995). For "exercise authority" see H. Scott Baldwin, "A Difficult Word: ΑΥΘΕΝΤΕΩ in 1 Timothy 2:12" and "Appendix 2: ΑΥΘΕΝΤΕΩ in Ancient Greek Literature" in Women in the Church: A Fresh Analysis of 1 Timothy 2:9-15 (Grand Rapids: Baker), 65-80 and 269-305. See especially Andreas J. Köstenberger and Thomas R. Schreiner, Women in the Church: An Interpretation and Application of 1 Timothy 2:9-15 (Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2016), Wolters, “The Meaning of Αὐθεντέω,” and Burk, “New and Old Departures in the Translation of Αὐθεντέω in 1 Timothy 2:12.”

³² John Chrysostom, Sermons in Genesis, cited in Baldwin, ΑΥΘΕΝΤΕΩ in 1 Timothy 2:12," 73-4, 283.

³³ Andreas Kostenberger, "A Complex Sentence Structure in 1 Timothy 2:12," in Women in the Church: A Fresh Analysis of 1 Timothy 2:9-15, eds. Andreas Kostenberger, Thomas Schreiner, and H. Scott Baldwin (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker), 84-104.

1 In 1 Timothy 2:12, Paul links “teach” and “exercise authority” with oude. This means both
 2 are positive or both are negative. Since “teach” is clearly positive, “exercise authority” must,
 3 likewise, be positive.³⁴ Therefore, it is correct to translate 1 Timothy 2:12, “I do not permit a
 4 woman to teach or to have authority over a man.” Paul is not merely forbidding women to 5 rule wickedly – by domineering, or usurping authority. Paul is forbidding that they rule in a
 6 church context. Women may lead in various ways, but just as men bear final responsibility
 7 for the doctrine of the church, so men bear final responsibility for the direction of the 8 church.

9
 10 Regarding authoritative teaching, this apostolic mandate is to be implemented consistently
 11 in the life and leadership of the local church. The implementation begins with, but is not
 12 limited to, the called services of divine worship. There are differences of opinion in the PCA
 13 on the proper definition and exercise of “authoritative teaching.” The committee urges 14 presbyteries and sessions to study this matter diligently and to practice their convictions
 15 (Rom. 14:1-8).

16
 17 1 Timothy 2:13 – Reasons for Male Leadership

18
 19 “For Adam was formed first, then Eve.”

20
 21 God implemented male leadership in the Garden of Eden, prior to the fall. By highlighting
 22 God’s creative acts in the beginning of time, Paul appeals to first principles. Likewise, Jesus
 23 reasoned from creation when he was questioned concerning marriage and divorce (Matt.
 24 19:3-9; cf. Gen. 1:27; Gen. 2:24). Further, Paul cited Genesis to explain male-female roles in 25 1 Corinthians 11. This citation to creation indicates a proto-rubric for the church, which is 26 further unfolded in the Pauline Epistles. This does not indicate, however, that women are 27 subservient ontologically or in terms of their capabilities. Moreover, as Christians, women
 28 and men are one in Christ (Gal. 3:28). Men and women are equal in value and in purpose;
 29 nevertheless, equality in Christ does not eradicate the different roles men and women 30 maintain.

31
 32 1 Timothy 2:13-15 – Roles of Women

33
 34 “For Adam was formed first, then Eve; and Adam was not deceived, but the woman was 35 deceived and became a transgressor. Yet she will be saved through child-bearing - if they 36 continue in faith, love and holiness with self-control.”

37
 38 This is a notoriously difficult passage and interpretations vary, but it is clear that Paul 39 affirms the continuing validity and blessing of the creation ordinance of procreation (Gen.
 40 1:28; Gen. 3:20; Gen. 4:1), and the mitigation of the curse of the fall for believing women
 41 (Gen. 3:16; 1 Tim. 2:15). At the very least, God blesses and preserves women in the roles of 42 wife and mother.

³⁴ Paul uses a distinct word for false teaching (heterodidaskaleo) in 1 Timothy 1:3 and 6:3.

1 Why does Paul suddenly shift from the subject of women not teaching authoritatively or
2 preaching and exercising the authority of elders to that of salvation and childbirth? Perhaps
3 he is drawing attention to the second of two role-reversals of creation in the fall
4 (man/animals and Adam/Eve).

6 Adam and Eve were to have dominion over the animals (Gen. 1:28), but in the fall, an
7 animal not only tells them what to do, but calls God a liar and urges them to disobey God
8 (Gen. 3:4-5). When they succumb to this role reversal (obeying an animal they were 9 supposed to have dominion over), the world is plunged into sin and misery: “They 10 exchanged the truth of God for a lie, and worshipped and served the creature rather than the 11 Creator, who is blessed forever. Amen” (Rom. 1:25).

13 In 1 Timothy 2:14, Paul draws attention to a second role reversal in Genesis 2. Eve is 14 deceived by the serpent, because, in part, Adam failed to play his role as husband and 15 covenant keeper. Though Adam was created first (1 Tim. 2:13) and was personally given the 16 command/prohibition by God before Eve was created (Gen. 2:15-17), Adam listened to his 17 wife’s voice instead of God’s command. Moses explicitly explains: “Then [God] said to 18 Adam, ‘Because you have listened to the voice of your wife, and have eaten from the tree
19 about which I commanded you, saying, “You shall not eat from it”; Cursed is the ground
20 because of you; In toil you will eat of it All the days of your life’” (Gen. 3:17). Paul’s whole
21 discussion in 1 Timothy 2:11-15 is squarely based on Genesis 1-3. Eve was deceived, but 22 Adam is responsible (Rom. 5:12, 19; 1 Cor. 15:21-22) because he failed in his role as 23 covenant keeper and federal head. Adam listened to Eve, even when she contradicted the 24 word God had personally spoken to him. Eve was deceived, but Adam disobeyed an explicit 25 command. His was high-handed sin.

27 Thus, Paul’s argument in 1 Timothy 2:13-15 explains the basis of his command in 1
28 Timothy 2:11-12, and warns of the consequences when it is disobeyed. Paul is calling
29 attention to the fact that abandonment of God’s order inevitably creates disorder and error, 30 while embracing that order is attendant with blessings (1 Tim. 2:15).

32 Incidentally, Paul both affirms women in their roles of service in the home and family, as 33 well as beyond them. Lydia, the businesswoman (Acts 16:14-15), and Phoebe, the patron
34 (Rom. 16:1-2) are highly regarded by Paul. There is no hint of rebuke or impropriety
35 regarding their professional vocation or standing, just as Proverbs 31:16-24 celebrates a 36 woman who manages an estate. Furthermore, Paul has a high view of Christian singleness
37 (see 1 Corinthians 7:32).

39 Conclusions for Male-Female Partnership

41 Because 1 Timothy 2 occupies a central place in all discussions of women and ministry, it
42 was examined in detail. Women should learn the faith, and share their knowledge in some 43 settings (Titus 2:4). They should not become the principal instructors and defenders of the 44 faith in the institutional church. This has been God's plan and order from the beginning, one 45 in which women thrive as they live out their faith.

1 Deacons: A Consideration of Acts 6 and 1 Timothy 3

2
3 As the number of disciples in the early church multiplied, some in need of assistance were 4 inevitably overlooked. The Grecian Jews—those who were neglected—grumbled until their 5 complaint reached the apostles. Previously, people brought their gifts to the apostles, who 6 had authority and responsibility to distribute them, but the church was growing too big.
7 Teaching and prayer are the apostles' essential calling. Therefore, others needed to take 8 responsibility to serve the needy: “Brothers, choose seven men from among you who are 9 known to be full of the Spirit and wisdom. We will turn this responsibility over to them and 10 will give our attention to prayer and the ministry of the word” (Acts 6:3-4).

11 12 Acts 6: Gifted Men Serve the Needs That Arise in Faithful Churches

13
14 The apostles presented criteria for the men who would take responsibility for serving the 15 needy. The church must choose wise, Spirit-filled men who will know how to love and care
16 for the needy. All seven names were Greek, perhaps easing their work with Greek widows.
17 Seven was a customary number for boards or committees in that day so the apostles
18 advocated normal cultural procedure. Still, the apostles asked the congregation to select its 19 next leaders. Pleased with the apostles' proposal, the people chose seven men and presented 20 their choices to the apostles. In Acts 6, the chosen men seem accountable to the apostles and 21 the whole church. Although the seven were not called deacons (diakonos), they served
22 (diakoneō), which leads some to believe that Acts 6 marks the basics of diaconal work:
23 caring for widows, caring for the neglected.

24
25 Of further concern is Acts 21:8. While Acts 6 does not call the seven chosen men,
26 “deacons,” Acts 21:8 calls Philip, who was chosen in Acts 6, “one of the seven.” J. M. Ross
27 argues that recourse to Acts 6 confuses study of the diaconate.³⁵ Edmund Clowney, among 28 others, argues that the seven in Acts 6 were “assistants to the ministers of the word” but not
29 “officers.” Many in the Presbyterian tradition disagree. Those who affirm Acts 6 as a
30 paradigm for the diaconate mentioned in 1 Timothy 3 observe that it is pedantic to insist on 31 the noun diakonos when the cognate verb is present. More importantly, it is clear that the 32 men 1) distributed material resources to meet ongoing needs in the church, 2) met spiritual 33 qualifications, 3) were set apart by prayer and by the laying on of hands, and 4) received the 34 blessing of the apostles and the whole church. While some disagree over whether Acts 6
35 describes the first commissioned deacons, the PCA BCO employs the aforementioned 36 insights to describe the roles of deacons.

37 38 1 Timothy 3:8-11 – An Overview

39
40 All Christians are called to a life of service “because the Lord himself has come in the form 41 of a servant.” It is both a spontaneous expression of love and a command of Christ. Every 42 Christian is a slave of Christ and therefore a servant (diakonos) of others. Some Christians,

³⁵ J. M. Ross, “A Reconsideration of the Diaconate,” Scottish Journal of Theology 12 (1959): 151-152.

1 however, have a special authority and commission to serve. Service is essential to all; the
2 commission to lead and to organize service, however, is for some.³⁶

3
4 The first clue that some are set apart for organized service is that the character traits for
5 deacons are similar to that of elders. While the skill set is different, the character required 6 for commission is similar.

7
8 Second, deacons are tested. Jesus first stated this principle: “You have been faithful over a 9 little, I will set you over much” (Matt. 25:21). Testing is not mentioned explicitly for the 10 overseer, but it is implied in 1 Timothy 3:7. 1 Timothy 3:10 is therefore rightly translated,
11 “Let them also be tested.”

12
13 Third, deacons are not teachers, but they hold the mysteries of the faith with a clear
14 conscience. Deacons must know how to make sound ministry decisions, how to explain their 15 work as they do it, and how to articulate the faith, even if they are not suited for public 16 teaching.

17
18 Fourth, 1 Timothy 3 has implicit, not explicit teaching about the work of a deacon; Paul
19 addresses character. Acts 6, therefore, serves by default as a model and judge that diaconal
20 work is chiefly mercy ministry. Organizational aspects (tending funds and buildings) of 21 diaconal work are largely traditional. While not necessarily misguided (i.e., ushering, 22 greeting, and caring for finances are real services that let apostles and pastors focus on their 23 ministries), the New Testament never names these tasks. Deacons first care for mercy
24 among the poor and the marginalized. Customary practices should not be read into the New 25 Testament.

26
27 1 Timothy 3:8:³⁷ “Likewise” signals that Paul is not changing topics completely.³⁸ He is 28 moving from the overseer (episkopos, singular in 1 Timothy 3:1-2 and Titus 1:7) to “deacons”
29 (plural). The shift from singular to plural raises questions that stand outside the scope of this 30 study. Still, the plural is no mystery. A congregation might require many deacons to meet
31 the material needs of a congregation. This interpretation assumes that Acts 6 defines 32 diaconal work.

33
34 To define the term diakonos in Paul’s usage, Yarbrough has listed uses of diakonos in Paul.
35 Diakonos (servant, minister, deacon) in Paul.³⁹

³⁶ T. F. Torrance, "Service in Jesus Christ," in Service in the Church, ed. James I. McCord and T. H. L. Parker (London: Epworth, 1966), 1-3.

³⁷ Note: The following comments on 3:8-13 draw heavily on Robert Yarbrough's forthcoming commentary on the Pastorals for Eerdmans. 1-2 Timothy, Titus. Pillar New Testament Commentary (Grand Rapids/Cambridge, UK: Eerdmans, forthcoming). Yarbrough is almost a co-author on some pages.

³⁸ See use of the same expression (hōautōs, likewise) in Rom 8:26; 1 Cor 11:15; 1 Tim 2:9; 3:11; 5:25; Titus 2:3, 6. It also occurs nine times in the Synoptic Gospels.

³⁹ Yarbrough, 1-2 Timothy, Titus.

1

| | |
|----------------|---|
| Rom. 13:4 | For the one in authority is God's servant for your good... |
| Rom. 15:8 | For I tell you that Christ has become a servant of the Jews on behalf of God's truth . . . |
| Rom. 16:1 | I commend to you our sister Phoebe, a deacon of the church in Cenchreae . . . |
| 1 Cor. 3:5 | What, after all, is Apollos? And Paul? Only servants , through whom you came to believe. |
| 2 Cor. 3:6 | He has made us competent as ministers of a new covenant |
| 2 Cor. 11:15 | his [the devil's] servants also masquerade as servants of righteousness. |
| Gal. 2:17 | is Christ then a servant of sin? (ESV) |
| Eph. 3:7 | Of this gospel I was made a minister according to the gift of God's grace |
| Eph. 6:21 | Tychicus the beloved brother and faithful minister in the Lord |
| Phil. 1:1 | To all the saints in Christ Jesus who are at Philippi, with the overseers and deacons |
| Col. 1:7 | Epaphras our beloved fellow servant [syndoulou]... is a faithful minister of Christ on your behalf. |
| Col. 1:23 | the gospel . . . of which I, Paul, became a minister . |
| Col. 4:7 | Tychicus is a beloved brother and faithful minister and fellow servant [syndoulos]. |
| 1 Tim. 3:8, 12 | Deacons likewise must be . . . Let deacons each be the husband of one wife |
| 1 Tim. 4:6 | If you put these things before the brothers, you will be a good servant of Christ |

2

3 Diakonos means someone who performs a service or ministry, but the term does not
4 normally label someone appointed to church office. A magistrate, Christ, Apollos, Paul, his 5 opponents, Tychicus, Epaphras, and Timothy are all called “deacon” in a non-technical, or 6 non-church-office use of the term.

7

8 A few uses of deacon seem like more technical or official uses. These include the officials at 9 Philippi and the deacons of 1 Timothy 3. Some would include Phoebe (Rom. 16:1). The 10 official uses refer to someone occupying a recognized position or ongoing role in the church.
11 Even with Acts 6, little is known about official deacon's work. Many practices rise from 12 church custom, often recent church custom.⁴⁰ Still, the practice at Philippi, where there were 13 both “overseers and deacons” is in view in 1 Timothy 3. A church has two classes of leader 14 – elder/overseer and deacon.

15

16 Paul first lists two desirable and two undesirable qualities of deacons. Deacons should be 17 “dignified” or “worthy of respect” (semnos). The term can mean dignified, noble, or 18 honorable (Phil. 4:8; 1 Tim. 3:11; Titus 2:2). Character and conduct go together.

19

⁴⁰ Luke Timothy Johnson's comments on early church structure and order provide a helpful framework (Luke Timothy Johnson, 1 and 2 Letters to Timothy, The Anchor Bible (New York, NY: Doubleday, 2001) 217-25.

1 They are also "not double-tongued." The Greek is mê dilogous - not double-talkers, who say
2 one thing and believe another. They do not lie or play the hypocrite. Integrity of speech is a
3 great emphasis in Proverbs, the Synoptics (Matt. 5:33-37; Matt. 12:34; Luke 6:45), James,
4 and Paul (Eph. 4:15, 25, 29; Eph. 5:4; Rom. 3:13-14). Harmful talk is a recurrent theme of
5 the Pastoral Epistles.⁴¹ Sadly, pastors, elders, and deacons lack this trait with remarkable
6 frequency, to the great harm of the church.

7
8 "Not addicted to much wine" and "not greedy for dishonest gain" are close to traits for elders
9 in Titus 1:7, 23. Greed is often condemned in the Scriptures.⁴² Deacons must be generous,
10 not mercenary. They should like to give resources to the needy. The tight-fisted deacon may 11 be a familiar church experience, but not to the New Testament deacons.

12
13 1 Timothy 3:9: Deacons "must hold the mystery of the faith with a clear conscience."
14 Yarbrough points out that this sounds like Stephen in Acts 6. He spoke with the Spirit (Acts 15 6:3, 5, 10, 55) with wisdom (Acts 6:3, 10), in deep faith (Acts 6:5), and by "God's grace and 16 power" (Acts 6:8, 60).

17
18 Paul's term, "mystery," signifies redemptive truths formerly concealed but now revealed at 19 Jesus' coming.⁴³ Paul's counsel to Timothy assumes that deacons know Scripture and 20 doctrine. To hold the truth with a "clear conscience" requires that experiential and cognitive 21 faith unite. Deacons need theological understanding and personal integrity.

22
23 1 Timothy 3:10: "And let them also be tested first." dokimazô, translated "tested," means 24 test and approve (apodokimazô means test and find wanting). Deacons are "also tested;" the 25 "also" refers to the implication that overseers are tested too. Like overseers, deacons are 26 tested both by groups⁴⁴ and individuals.⁴⁵ Timothy must make "full inquiry" to discern the 27 work and the character of deacons,⁴⁶ no easy matter since deceivers abound (1 Thess. 5:21).

28
29 "First" and "then" in 1 Timothy 3:10 point to a process of assessment: If they are blameless, 30 then Timothy can consider them eligible. "Blameless" translates anenklêtos, which 31 (negatively) means innocent of charges. Positively, deacons should display the range and 32 depth of Christian faith and practice. If Timothy establishes that they are mature, he can "let 33 them serve as deacons" (from the verb diakoneô).

34
35 1 Timothy 3:11: The NIV and ESV render 1 Timothy 3:11 as a series of qualifications for 36 "their wives." But other translations (ASV, RSV, NASB, NRSV, CEV) translate gune as 37 "the women."⁴⁷ The root of the uncertainty lies with the Greek word gune – γυνή which can

⁴¹ 1 Tim 1:7; 3:11; 5:13; 6:4; Titus 1:10; 2:9.

⁴² Rom 1:29; Eph 4:19; 5:3; Col 3:5; 1 Thess 2:5.

⁴³ See, e.g., Rom 16:25-26; 1 Cor 2:7; Eph 3:3-9; Col 1:26.

⁴⁴ E.g., 2 Cor 13:5: "Examine yourselves to see whether you are in the faith; test yourselves. Do you not realize that Christ Jesus is in you —unless, of course, you fail the test?"

⁴⁵ E.g., Gal 6:4: "Each one should test their own actions."

⁴⁶ John Calvin, The Second Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Corinthians and the Epistles to Timothy, Titus, and Philemon, trans. T. A. Smail (Edinburgh: Oliver and Boyd, 1964), 229.

⁴⁷ Also, "the" or "their" which appear in most translations is not present in the Greek.

1 mean either "woman" or "wife." The comparable masculine noun can mean either "man" or
2 "husband." Does 1 Timothy 3:11 mean "women likewise" or "wives likewise"?

3
4 Phil Ryken notes that "woman/wife" is such a common term "that it hardly seems sufficient
5 to designate an office in the church."⁴⁸ If Paul wanted to indicate deaconesses, he chose an 6 extraordinarily minimal way to say so. On the other hand, the failure to mention qualities of 7 overseers' wives in 1 Timothy 3:1-7 seems to count against 1 Timothy 3:11 speaking of 8 deacons' wives in 3:11.⁴⁹ At a minimum, the word is open to more than one interpretation.
9 The flow of thought is also difficult. Does Paul move from deacons to deaconesses, or from 10 deacons to their wives, and possibly overseer's wives as well?

11
12 Warfield, although an advocate of female deacons, says he "cannot believe" that Paul meant
13 "to speak of deaconesses" in 1 Timothy 3:11, "since this would require us to assume... a 14 double transition from one subject to another, of the harshest and most incredible kind." He 15 believes the office of deacon for women rests on the "narrow" and uncertain case of Phoebe
16 in Romans 16:1, and the record of female deacons in the early church.⁵⁰

17
18 Warfield favors female deacons because Romans 16:1 probably indicates that Phoebe was a
19 deacon, but Guy Waters draws the opposite conclusion from the same data. No one doubts
20 that Paul lists the "qualifications for a certain group of women," but if 1 Timothy 3:11 does
21 not describe female deacons, and if Phoebe (Rom. 16:1) might be a woman known for her
22 service or might be a deacon, then nothing is established.⁵¹ Warfield thinks the early
23 church's use of deaconesses proves his interpretation of Romans 16:1, but to base
24 interpretation of the New Testament on early church practices is a perilous move. Since the 25 evidence is so thin, Waters judges that women should serve as "female assistants" to the 26 deacons, not ordained deacons. Even if the office of deacon is one of service rather than rule 27 (per the BCO), it "is an office" which "necessarily entails the possession and exercise of 28 authority."⁵²

29 Interpretations throughout Church History

30
31
32 Since many translations render 1 Timothy 3:11 with "wives," many exegetes believe Paul
33 refers to wives of deacons, not deaconesses. On the other hand, those who advocate female
34 deacons point out a long history of deaconesses, with supporters such as John Calvin, B. B.
35 Warfield, and other conservative Presbyterians, including the RPCNA.⁵³ The history of the 36 question, however, is complex. Calvin's claims must be qualified, and Warfield's advocacy
37 of female deacons requires comment. The following traces key church leaders and their
38 interpretations of 1 Timothy 3:8-11, beginning earlier in church history.⁵⁴

⁴⁸ Phil Ryken, 1 Timothy (Philipsburg, NJ: P&R, 2007), 131.

⁴⁹ Kelly, Pastoral Epistles (London: A & C Black, 1963), 83-4.

⁵⁰ B. B. Warfield, "Presbyterian Deaconesses," Presbyterian Review (1889): 283-286.

⁵¹ Guy Prentiss Waters, How Jesus Runs the Church (Phillipsburg, NJ: P & R, 2011), 112-113. •

⁵² Waters, Jesus Runs the Church, 114-115.

⁵³ Gregory R. Perry, "Phoebe of Cenchreae and 'Women' of Ephesus: Deacons in the Earliest Churches," Presbyterion 36, no. 1 (Spring 2010): 9-36.

⁵⁴ The next paragraph follows Ryken, 1 Timothy, 132-3.

1 In the second century, "church women provided nursing mothers who sat in the public
2 squares," while other women scoured the streets "to collect the unwanted babies abandoned
3 in the night." They "nursed, bathed, and raised babies" who would otherwise have died of 4 exposure or become slaves.⁵⁵ This was representative diaconal work in the early church.
5 J. M. Ross's survey of women's ministry in the early church concludes that they paralleled a
6 number of tasks performed by male deacons. They visited the sick, acted as doorkeepers (for 7 a women's entrance?) in the church, assisted in the baptism of women, catechized women,
8 and sponsored orphans.⁵⁶

9
10 Chrysostom, of the fourth century, also described an "order" of deaconesses that is 11 "necessary and useful and honorable in the Church."⁵⁷

12
13 Calvin is claimed, by those who promote deaconesses, as an advocate for their position, but 14 his teaching is complex. He had deaconesses in Geneva, but he limited their role: "Women
15 could fill no other public office than to devote themselves to the care of the poor." He placed 16 them in the second of two types of deacon. The first group must "distribute the alms," the 17 second "devoted themselves to the care of the poor and sick." Men (Acts 6) did the 18 administration, women as well as men performed the service.⁵⁸ In Calvin's commentary on 19 1 Timothy 3:11, he says the wives of deacons and overseers perform this service, saying,
20 "He refers here to the wives of both bishops and deacons."⁵⁹ In his commentary on Romans
21 16:1, however, Calvin says of Phoebe, "Paul commends her on account of her office."
22 Readers cannot simply conclude Calvin wanted to ordain women as deacons, both because 23 of the remarks in the Institutes, his most settled, authoritative work, and because his 24 comments on Romans 16:1 also call Phoebe "a helper to all the godly" and "an assistant of 25 the Cenchranean church."⁶⁰

26
27 Warfield also advocated for a recognized group of women, which he calls either deacons or 28 (more commonly) deaconesses. His argument rests on the status of Phoebe, the servant
29 (diakonos) of the church at Cenchranea (Rom. 16:1) and the reference to a primitive order of 30 deaconesses in the letter from Pliny the Younger, governor of Bithynia, to Emperor Trajan,
31 in 112 A.D. Pliny says, "I judged it... necessary to find out what the truth [about Christianity]
32 was by torturing two female slaves who were called deaconesses. But I discovered nothing."
33 Warfield judges the women to be members of a servant office. They "constituted a female
34 diaconate similar to and of like standing with the board of deacons which, in the New

⁵⁵ Ray Bakke, A Theology as Big as the City (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity, 1997), 192.

⁵⁶ J. M. Ross, "Reconsideration of the Diaconate," Scottish Journal of Theology, vol. 12, Issue 2, 1959, 153.

⁵⁷ John Chrysostom, "Homilies on the Epistles of St. Paul the Apostle to Timothy, Titus, and Philemon," trans. and ed. Philip Schaff, Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, First Series, 14 vols. (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1988), 13:441.

⁵⁸ John Calvin, Institutes of the Christian Religion, trans. Ford Lewis Battles (Philadelphia: Westminster, 1960), 2:1061-2.

⁵⁹ John Calvin, "Commentaries on the Epistles to Timothy, Titus and Philemon," Calvin's Commentaries, Volume XXI, trans. Rev. William Pringle (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker, 2003), 87.

⁶⁰ John Calvin, "Commentaries on the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans," Calvin's Commentaries, vol. 19, trans. Rev. John Owen (Grand Rapids: Baker, 2003), 542.

1 Testament, we find in every church."⁶¹ Warfield surveyed and criticized various ways to
 2 organize deaconesses. He concluded that "the church has a distinct right to organize the 3 work of women" in a variety of ways as long as there is "some sufficient form of 4 ecclesiastical oversight" that created "adequate points of union with the official church
 5 machinery" and guarded against the dangers inherent in independent associations.⁶²

6
 7 1 Timothy 3:8-11: Possible Interpretations

8
 9 It seems that there are four ways to understand Paul in 1 Timothy 3:11.

10
 11 First, the women may be part of the general order of deacons. This is unlikely since they are 12 set apart from deacons by the term "likewise" (ὡσαύτως), just as deacons are set apart from 13 elders by "likewise" (ὡσαύτως) in 1 Timothy 3:8, and by a somewhat different set of 14 qualifications. It also seems unlikely that a new order would be 1) so short and 2) embedded 15 in the description of another office.

16
 17 Second, the women are female deacons or deaconesses who correspond somehow to the 18 male deacons. This is doubtful for two reasons. First, the statement about the wives or 19 women is embedded in a larger section that describes the duties of male deacons. If 20 deaconesses are a distinct group, why is their character, in 1 Timothy 3:11, sandwiched
 21 between three verses that describe the qualities of a deacon (3:8-10) and two that comment
 22 on their family life and reputation (3:12-13)? Second, outside this passage, no clear
 23 Scripture references an office of deaconess. In Romans 16:1 Phoebe may be a deaconess,
 24 but it is unclear whether she held an office, since Romans 16 does not focus on church order,
 25 and since the word diakonos – δῆκονος is generally nontechnical in the New Testament.⁶³

26
 27 Third, Paul has a separate office in view. "Likewise" marked a new category in 1 Timothy 3:8,
 28 so it could do the same here. Furthermore, the Greek does not have a possessive pronoun—
 29 their wives—or even a definite article—the wives—possibly suggesting that the women are a
 30 separate group, not simply deacons' wives. On the other hand, the absence of the possessive
 31 pronoun or definite article may signify that Paul omitted the definite article, as he often did
 32 when referring to people in this section (e.g., 1 Timothy 3:1, 8, 12). Finally, why should 33 deacons' wives be singled out for a separate list of qualities, when no qualities are required
 34 for the wives of elders? On the other hand, Yarbrough detects a possible nod to wives of 35 overseers when Paul says, "In the same way, deacons" (1 Tim. 3:8). The similarity "affirms
 36 a close parallel between the two—and if deacons' wives are critical to the diaconal ministry,
 37 that holds no less true for the wives of pastoral church leaders."⁶⁴

⁶¹ B. B. Warfield, "Presbyterian Deaconesses," Presbyterian Review (1889): 286.

⁶² Ibid., 292-3.

⁶³ Again, Romans 15:8 calls Jesus a diakonos. In 1 Corinthians 3:5 it is Paul and Apollos. Paul is again diakonos in 2 Corinthians 3:6, 6:4. In Ephesians 6:21 Tychicus is diakonos, in Colossians 1:7 it is Epaphras, and so on.

⁶⁴ Robert Yarbrough, 1-2 Timothy, Titus.

1 In this interpretation, women are assistants to deacons, perhaps taking on duties that
2 especially pertain to ministry to women. Kelly summarizes the testimony of the practices of 3 deaconesses in the early church, "female officiants were required for duties in connexion
4 [sic] with women."⁶⁵ This is plausible for two reasons. First, some of women's needs could
5 be handled more appropriately by women than by men. Second, there may be a hint that
6 women have special, recognized tasks elsewhere in the Pastoral Epistles. For example, Paul
7 takes note of exemplary widows in 1 Timothy 5:9-10 and blesses older women who train
8 younger women in Titus 2:3-5. (As an aside connecting to application, if option three is 9 correct, then churches might have women's advisory committees that regularly work with 10 deacons to consult on policy and serve the needy. See Chapter Four for further discussion on 11 application.)

12
13 A fourth interpretation is that the women are indeed the wives of deacons. Given that guna –
14 γυνή can mean woman or wife, twice in the context, the term clearly means "wife" (1 Tim.
15 3:2; 1 Tim. 3:12). It is very unlikely that a term would shift meanings from 3:11 to 3:12.
16 Also, Paul's failure to mention this person's marital status, prominent as marriage was with 17 elders and deacons, indicates that it refers to deacons' wives.⁶⁶ Finally, if the women are 18 wives, it would explain why 1 Timothy 3:10 is embedded in the section on deacons: one
19 requirement for deacons is that their wives be able to assist them. The very brevity of 20 1 Timothy 3:11 also points toward "wives" as the right translation. Would Paul say so little 21 if he were instituting a new class of officer?⁶⁷

22
23 Interpretations three and four stand on firmer exegetical ground than one and two, and 24 number four stands most firmly of all. Whichever view is correct, Paul anticipates that 25 women will have a hand in diaconal work. Yarbrough says, "If indeed Paul has deacons'
26 (and overseers'?) wives in mind, this is another indication of his concern for the full 27 engagement and benefit of women in the ministry of the church."⁶⁸

28
29 Even if Paul does not have deaconesses in mind in 1 Timothy 3:11, many will point to 30 Romans 16:1, which says Phoebe was a diakonos of the church. But again, as the chart on 31 Paul's use of diakonos indicates, it normally has a non-technical sense, so that the term by 32 itself proves nothing regarding office. On the other hand, Romans 16:1 shows women are 33 recognized for something. To say it differently, whatever one's stand on women in the office
34 of deacon, there is widespread agreement that women are essential servants in the church,
35 and some level of screening, recognition, and regular service are in view.

36
37 All four positions agree women should be involved in diaconal work. How their work
38 should be construed ecclesiastically is another matter. If deacons have authority in the 39 church, roughly on par with elders, so that church members rightly promise to submit to 40 them and obey them, then 1 Timothy 2:12 prohibits female deacons. If deacons do not 41

⁶⁵ Kelly, Pastorals, 84.

⁶⁶ George Knight, Commentary on the Pastoral Epistles, 171.

⁶⁷ Ryken, 1 Timothy, 130-1.

⁶⁸ Robert Yarbrough, 1-2 Timothy, Titus.

1 exercise authority, if they lead by example and by service, then female deacons or
 2 deaconesses are conceivable. Most leadership occurs by service and example, by experience
 3 and persuasion.

4
 5 If deacons are leaders by way of service, and not by way of rule, the office of deacon may be
 6 shared by both men and women. Yet "service, not rule" may be an inadequate description of 7 deacons. BCO 9-2 says of deacons, "It is their duty also to develop the grace of liberality in 8 the members of the church, to devise effective methods of collecting the gifts of the people."
 9 These points sound authoritative, overlapping somewhat with the role of elders. The 10 authoritative note may also appear in BCO 9-5. Calvin apparently bent his thought to some 11 version of this issue when he distinguished two types of deacon, one more administrative 12 and financial, held by men. Meanwhile women were to be devoted to "caring for the poor 13 themselves." On the other hand, he calls this service a "public office."⁶⁹

14
 15 1 Timothy 3:11: Character Traits

16
 17 Regardless of whether Paul envisions women or wives in 1 Timothy 3, he still sets forth
 18 traits that qualify people for service. First then, they must be "dignified," which translates 19 semnos, a term already discussed at 1 Timothy 3:8. Second, they are "not slanderers," which 20 translates diabolous, a term for malicious speech, false accusations, and slander (2 Tim.
 21 3:3). The term is used for the Devil in Revelation 12:9-10. At a minimum, all officers and 22 servants must know how to keep quiet about the needs of the people they serve. What a
 23 betrayal to speak maliciously or falsely about the people in need. Third, they are "sober-
 24 minded," translating nephalious. Paul also requires sobriety or temperance of elders in 25 1 Timothy 3:2 and of older men in Titus 2:2. Fourth, they should be "faithful in all things."
 26 "Faithful," translating pistos, is a common term in the Pastoral Epistles, one used to describe
 27 doctrines (1 Tim. 1:15; 1 Tim. 3:1) as well as people.

28
 29 If indeed Paul describes the wives of deacons and elders, his decision to describe their traits
 30 needs to be weighed. Clearly, Paul expects husbands and wives to operate together; he saw 31 them "as integral to ministry infrastructure and execution." Even if the wives "did not hold 32 formal office," they still constituted a major force in the ministry of the congregations of 33 Ephesus, and in the ministry of congregations today.⁷⁰ With privilege and position, formal
 34 or informal, comes responsibility. Just as men can and do face shipwreck (1 Tim. 1:19)
 35 through doctrinal deviation or moral turpitude, so women can and do wound their families
 36 and their churches if they are slanderous, unfaithful, or frivolous. On the other hand, faithful
 37 wives enjoy the same rewards as faithful deacons and elders, described in 1 Timothy 3:13 38 and

39 1 Peter 5:4, "an unfading crown of glory."

⁶⁹ John Calvin, Institutes of Christian Religion trans. Ford Lewis Battles (Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1960), 2:1061 (4.3.9).

⁷⁰ Robert Yarbrough, 1-2 Timothy, Titus.

1 COHERENCE BETWEEN THE ROLES OF WOMEN
2 DURING THE EARTHLY MINISTRY OF JESUS
3 AND THE PAULINE EPISTLES
4

5 Jesus chose twelve males as his apostles: Simon (called Peter), Andrew, James, John, Philip,
6 Bartholomew, Thomas, Thaddaeus, Simon, and Judas (Matt. 10:2-4). Jesus appointed the 7 apostles as his foundational witnesses. He trained them to testify to what their ears heard,
8 their eyes saw, and their hands touched during His ministry (1 John 1:1-4; John 1:14; Acts 9 1:8; Acts 4:20). After His resurrection, they saw the wounds on Jesus' hands and feet. They 10 touched, saw, believed, and testified (Luke 24:39; John 20:20-5; Acts 4:20).⁷¹ They 11 preached and wrote down the church's foundational message.

12
13 Evangelical egalitarians do not deny this, but they do try to minimize its significance.⁷² They 14 claim Jesus' choice of male leaders set no precedent for Christian leadership today.⁷³ They 15 reason that temporary conditions, related to ancient cultures, prevented Jesus from 16 appointing female apostles. Since those conditions belong to the distant past, Jesus' choice
17 of male leadership allegedly belongs to the past as well.⁷⁴

18
19 Would Jesus refrain from choosing women as disciples and traveling companions because 20 that choice would have offended social sensibility of His day? Jesus violated cultural 21 conventions whenever He saw fit. He touched lepers. He called tax-collectors and prostitutes
22 His friends. He healed Gentiles. He violated customs for the Sabbath. He tossed recognized
23 businessmen out of the temple. Jesus violated convention by talking to women, discipling
24 them, and letting them travel with Him (Luke 8:1-2). He shattered so many conventions;
25 why should he quail at one more? Besides, "when moral issues were at stake, Jesus did not 26 bend to social pressure."⁷⁵

27
28 Were women uneducated, intellectually inferior, and, therefore, unacceptable as public
29 leaders? The Twelve were not highly educated either (Matt. 13:54-57; John 7:15; Acts 4:13)
30 and early Christians accepted their leadership. Formal education is not a requirement for 31 ministry.
32

⁷¹ On Jesus choosing and training foundational eyewitnesses, see Herman Ridderbos, Redemptive History and the New Testament Scriptures 2nd revised ed., (Philipsburg, NJ: P & R, 1988), 12-24.

⁷² Non-evangelical Christian feminists do deny the veracity of the gospel accounts. They allege that there were many female leaders in the early church and that a male-dominated hierarchical church later suppressed information about early female leadership. See chapter 9 for more on non-evangelical feminists.

⁷³ On finding precedents in Scripture, see chapter 2, "A Note on Method."

⁷⁴ This summarizes published arguments and conversations with feminists. See Rebecca Groothuis, Good News for Women (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1997), 109-111; Paul K. Jewett, The Ordination of Women (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1980), 58-60; Stanley Grenz, Women in the Church: A Biblical Theology of Women in the Ministry (Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press, 1995), 211-212. For a rejoinder, see James Borland, "Women in the Life and Teachings of Jesus," Recovering Biblical Manhood and Womanhood, eds. John Piper and Wayne Grudem (Wheaton, Ill : Crossway, 1991), 120.

⁷⁵ Borland, "Women in the Life and Teachings of Jesus," 120-3.

1 Was travel too dangerous for women? Travel was dangerous for men, too. Paul was
 2 imprisoned, lashed, beaten, stoned, shipwrecked, sleepless, hungry, thirsty, cold, and naked
 3 (2 Cor. 12:23-27). Furthermore, the apostles' wives sometimes traveled with them, dangers
 4 notwithstanding (1 Cor. 9:5).

5
 6 Many also reason that if Jesus' choice of male disciples signifies that only males can lead,
 7 then the choice of twelve Jewish disciples should signify that only Jews can lead.⁷⁶ That is,
 8 if the gender of the choice is normative, then so is the ethnicity. Since Jesus' choice of 9 Jewish leaders does not set a precedent, egalitarians argue His choice of males does not set a 10 precedent either.

11
 12 This argument rests on an analogy. Jesus' decision to choose men first is the same as his 13 decision to choose Jews first. Since the appointment of Jewish leaders was temporary, they 14 reason, the appointment of males is temporary too. But the analogy fails historically and 15 biblically. The appointment of Israelites is different from the appointment of males.
 16 Historically, the appointment of Israelite disciples is a unique element in God's plan of 17 salvation. Scripture shows that Israel's privileges were temporary. When the gospel went to 18 the Gentiles, Gentiles soon began to lead. See Titus, Epaphroditus, Tychicus, and Luke 19 (2 Cor. 8:16-23; Phil. 2:25-30; Col. 4:7-14; Eph. 6:21-22; Philemon 23-34).⁷⁷ Men, such as 20 Titus, exercised great authority. Paul left Titus in Crete to straighten out Paul's unfinished
 21 business and to "appoint elders in every town" (Titus 1:5). No woman is given such a charge.
 22

23 The apostles saw Jesus' choice of twelve male apostles as a precedent. When they replaced
 24 Judas, they said a male must take his place: "Therefore it is necessary to choose one of the 25 men who have been with us the whole time" (Acts 1:21). The word for "men" is not 26 anthropos, a human, but aner, a male. Later, the apostles followed the precedent again and 27 had the church choose seven males (aner) to oversee the church's mercy ministry (Acts 6:1-6).
 28

29 Ephesians 5 and Subordination

30
 31 Few texts are more controversial than, "Wives submit to your husbands" (Eph. 5:22). Why?
 32 Many men abuse Paul's command, citing it as a pretext for selfish domination of women.
 33 The submission of wives does not imply domination by husbands, as Ephesians shows.
 34 Also, in an age that resists the concept of submission to authority, many women (like many 35 men) resent the idea that they should submit to anyone, including their husbands.
 36

37 In context, the command, "wives submit," develops two broader imperatives. Ephesians 5:1-2
 38 reads, "Be imitators of God... and live a life of love, just as Christ loved us and gave himself
 39 up for us." Ephesians 5:18 says, "Do not get drunk on wine.... Instead, be filled in the 40 Spirit." Grammatically, the next five verbal nouns are participles that describe the character
 41 of a Spirit-filled life. Spirit-filled people will demonstrate His influence by "addressing one 42 another in psalms, hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody to the Lord with 43 all your heart, giving thanks always... submitting to one another out of reverence for Christ"
 44 (Eph. 5:18-20, ESV).

⁷⁶ Aida Besançon Spencer, Beyond the Curse: Women Called to Ministry (Grand Rapids: Baker), 45

⁷⁷ Most men found in New Testament leadership lists have Gentile names. In Colossians 4:11-14, Paul records several, then adds that Barnabas and Jesus-Justus are "the only Jews among my fellow workers."

1 The phrase "submitting to one another" stands as a banner over Ephesians 5:22-6:9, which is
2 one of the longer descriptions of family life in the Bible. "Submitting to one another" is a
3 striking phrase, an apparent oxymoron. Submission is one-directional in New Testament and
4 extrabiblical Greek usage. People submit (hypotasso) to authorities—to God, king, governor,
5 or officer. People submit to parents and laws. Submission means one person yields to the 6 will of another. But how can two people submit to each other? They cannot both outrank the 7 other. Should parents submit to children? Can a husband and wife each submit to the other?
8 There are two possible answers.

9
10 The first possibility is that believers should submit to whatever authority is over them. On 11 this view, the command to submit to each other does not mean, everyone should submit to 12 everyone, as if all authority structures cease. Rather, Paul means that Christians should yield
13 whenever someone has proper authority over them (with the necessary caveat from Acts 14 5:29—one must disobey if an authority commands sinful acts or sinful inaction). "Submit to 15 one another" does not mean parents should submit to their children just as children submit to 16 parents. Parents should serve their children so selflessly that it may appear that the parents
17 are submitting, but irreversible authority structures remain. Parents can still tell children
18 when to go to bed, but children may not reply, "Fine, but you should go to bed too."

19
20 A second possibility is that all fixed authority relations are relativized, so that no one has the 21 right to exercise authority over anyone else except by temporary necessity or mutual
22 agreement. So husbands have no general duty to lead their wives, pastors have no intrinsic
23 authority over their church and employers have no objective authority over employees.

24
25 There are several reasons to favor and affirm the first possibility: "Submit to one another"
26 means all Christians should submit to the relevant authorities, not "Everyone submits to 27 everyone." If the following arguments are valid, then authority structures remain at home
28 and church.⁷⁸

29
30 Reason 1: The term "submit" (hypotasso – ὑποτάσσω) means to subject, subordinate, bring 31 under control or obey. Excluding Ephesians 5, submission is one-directional in all New 32 Testament uses. Hypotasso normally refers to one person, who is lower in position or power,
33 yielding to a person of higher position or power. Therefore, to "submit to one another" does 34 not mean all Christians submit to everyone, it means they submit to whatever authorities are 35 appropriate. That is, "submit to one another" means submit whenever there is a rightful 36 authority.

37
38 Reason 2: The chief reason to speak of mutual submission is the pronoun "to each other."
39 The phrase "to one another" translates one Greek pronoun, "ἀλλήλοις." In English, "one 40 another" implies full reciprocity, but the Greek does not. There is full reciprocity in 41 Philippians 2:3, "Consider one another better than yourselves," and in Mark 9:50, "Be at 42 peace with one another." Other times, it is not fully reciprocal. In Galatians 6:2, "Bear one 43 another's burdens," does not mean everyone trades burdens with everyone else. Rather, some ⁷⁸ Hurley, Man and Woman, 139-41.

1 should help others as Galatians 6:5 shows, "Each one should carry his own load." Paul does
2 not envision total reciprocity. Rather, those who have lighter burdens carry others' burdens
3 when appropriate. Similarly, Christians should submit when appropriate. Similarly,
4 Ephesians 5 commands that people submit to whomever exercises proper authority over
5 them. Ephesians 5:22-6:9 does not teach full reciprocity of submission. Children obey parents
6 and slaves submit to masters, but not visa versa. The presumption, therefore, is that absolute
7 reciprocity is not the norm for marriage either – Wives submit, husbands love sacrificially.
8 Again, a husband should serve his wife so selflessly that it may appear that he submits to her
9 needs or wishes, but selflessness is actually a form of leadership, according to Paul.

10
11 The text also limits the extent of the submission, so that it falls short of total mutuality.
12 Thus, wives are not told to submit to all men but to their own husbands. Further, Paul tells 13 children to obey and slaves to submit, but he never tells husbands, parents, and masters to 14 submit to wives, children, or slaves.

15
16 Reason 3: Paul's other writings show that authority structures remain. Paul commands
17 Christians in Rome to submit to governing authorities. Paul orders the church to submit to 18 their overseers. He neither commands the government to submit to the people, nor tells 19 overseers to submit to the people (1 Thess. 5:12). Ephesians 5 neither teaches full reciprocity
20 nor ends authority structures. Wives submit to husbands, children obey parents, and slaves 21 obey masters, but not vice versa.

22
23 Paul's directions do alter the concept of authority. If husbands sacrifice for their wives, if 24 parents do nothing to exasperate their children, if masters never threaten but treat slaves
25 respectfully (Eph. 5:25; Eph. 6:4; Eph. 6:9), if authorities wield power for others, the spirit 26 has changed, even if structure has not.

27
28 Authorities remain. Yet, if they lead benevolently, their authority will appear to fade. When 29 a husband loves his wife, when parents nurture their children, when masters forgo threats, 30 when authorities bend to the needs of their subordinates, casual observers might think they 31 have abdicated. In the world, the powerful lord it over others for their benefit. Not so in the 32 family of faith. To a widow newly married to a Christian husband, to an orphan newly 33 adopted by a Christian father, all would seem new, if they left the sway of a typically self-
34 indulgent lord. Their needs matter. Arbitrary demands wane. Christians should exercise
35 authority with enough love that all life seems new. Still, Christians are not free to create 36 whatever arrangement seems workable. Men still bear responsibility to direct the family, for 37 its good.

38
39 Of course marriage is different from other authority relations. Paul tells children and slaves
40 to obey; he tells wives to submit, not obey, suggesting the husband-wife relationship is more
41 nearly reciprocal. Remember that parents can tell children to go to bed. Yet, marriage is so 42 nearly reciprocal that a wife can summon her husband to bed (1 Cor. 7:3-5). Further,
43 submission as understood in Greco-Roman culture allowed a certain level of freedom to 44 order affairs within the parameters established by a leader (although today, submission is an 45 intensively pejorative term).

46

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44

CHAPTER THREE
ORDINATION –A DEFINITION, WITH SPECIAL
REFERENCE TO THE OFFICE OF THE DIACONATE

The Book of Church Order defines ordination as “the authoritative admission of one duly called to an office in the Church of God, accompanied with prayer and the laying on of hands, to which it is proper to add the giving of the right hand of fellowship” (BCO 17-2).

Within the church universal, ordination has been viewed in two distinct ways:

1. The authoritative act of the church inducting one into an ecclesiastical office which gives to the ordinand the authority to exercise ecclesiastical office, or
2. The authoritative act of the church inducting one into an ecclesiastical office which gives to the ordinand the authority to exercise ecclesiastical office and also, through the act of ordination, the spiritual gifts to exercise the ecclesiastical office. Proof texts for the idea of ordination conveying spiritual gifts include John 20:22-23; 1 Timothy 1:18; 1 Timothy 4:14. Communion such as the Roman Catholic Church and Eastern Orthodox Churches regard ordination as conveying both authority and spiritual gifts. They also consider ordination to Holy Orders to be a sacrament.

Most Protestants, including those within the Reformed tradition, hold to the authority-only view and not the authority-plus-spiritual-gifts view, and do not regard ordination as a sacrament.

BCO 7-2 lays out the traditional Reformed view of ordination to the eldership that involves a personal sense of divine calling to service, evidence of providential enablement and spiritual gifts, and the approbation of the church as necessary pre-requisites for ordination. It recognizes two ordinary and perpetual offices in the church, elders and deacons.

Further, the PCA’s branch of Reformed and Presbyterian churches formally expresses that the Scriptures and history reserve ordination for sent and qualified men. Other branches of Reformed and Presbyterian churches permit that women may be ordained to the diaconate, according to their understanding of biblical texts and historical precedent.

While the committee members hold to the authority-only view of ordination, there is still a diversity of views on the definition. The majority of members agree with the definition below:

Ordination, biblically, historically, and with specificity in Reformed and Presbyterian evangelical churches, is the formal setting aside of a called, sent, and qualified man from the fellowship of an ecclesiastical assembly consisting of God’s covenant people to a specific office, with vows affirming the responsibilities, power, and authority necessary for the fulfillment of the specified, ecclesiastical office.

1 ORDINATION AND THE LAYING ON OF HANDS:
 2 A BRIEF BIBLICAL AND HISTORICAL SURVEY
 3

4 In Book IV of his Institutes, Calvin writes:

5
 6 It remains to consider the form of ordination, to which we have assigned the 7 last place in the call, (see chap. iv., sec. 14, 15.) It is certain, that when the 8 apostles appointed any one to the ministry, they used no other ceremony than 9 the laying on of hands. This form was derived, I think, from the custom of the 10 Jews, who, by the laying on of hands, in a manner presented to God whatever
 11 they wished to be blessed and consecrated... In this way they consecrated 12 pastors and teachers; in this way they consecrated deacons.⁷⁹

13
 14 What follows is a brief⁸⁰ overview of the biblical basis for ordination in the church,
 15 examining particular words and passages that display elements relevant to the doctrine. The 16 overview specifically examines how these particular words and passages relate to someone 17 or something being set apart or appointed to sacred work accompanied by the laying on of 18 hands. While the elements of being set apart and the laying on of hands are not visible in 19 every passage that looks like consecration for God's work, one or more of the following
 20 components will be present: 1) divine gifting 2); God's presence to empower ministry;
 21 3) recognition by human authority. This recognition by human authority is often, but by no
 22 means always, said to occur with the laying on of hands.

23
 24 Ἐπιτίθημι

25
 26 The most common definition in the ESV for epitithemi is “to place something on or transfer 27 to (a place or object).” In the New Testament, epitithemi is commonly used to express the 28 laying on of hands. The Synoptic Gospel writers often use this word to indicate Jesus’
 29 healing of people by the laying on of hands (Matt. 9:18; Mk. 5:23; Mk. 6:5; Mk. 7:32; Mk.
 30 8:23, 25; Lk. 4:40; Lk.13:13). On two occasions in Acts, it is used to refer to the receiving of 31 or filling of the Holy Spirit by the laying on of hands (Acts 8:19; Acts 9:17 [also includes 32 Paul receiving his sight]).

33
 34 Ἐπιτίθημι also occurs frequently in the Septuagint. Most of those occurrences are in the 35 Torah with particular concentration in Exodus and Leviticus. It is the verb of choice when 36 the writer wants to indicate the laying on of hands (e.g., Exod. 29:10, 15, 19; Lev. 1:4; Lev.
 37 4:4). In these cases, a transfer of some sort is occurring. Thus, in the New Testament, the 38 apostles would have been accustomed to this practice of the laying on of hands to signify a
 39 transfer with liturgical or ecclesial significance.

⁷⁹ John Calvin and Henry Beveridge, Institutes of the Christian Religion (Edinburgh: The Calvin Translation Society, 1845), 3:71.

⁸⁰ Time does not permit the committee to provide an exhaustive study. However, we believe that the brief overview provides enough information to draw certain conclusions.

1 In 1 Timothy 5:17ff Paul addresses Timothy regarding the way elders are to be honored and
2 held accountable in the church. In that context, he instructs Timothy not to be hasty in the 3 laying (ἐπιτίθημι) on of hands. That is, not to be hasty in ordaining men to the office of 4 elder. The nominal form of ἐπιτίθημι (ἐπίθεσις) is found in 1 Timothy 4:14 and 5 2 Timothy 1:6 to refer to Timothy's ordination to ecclesiastic office.

6
7 In the case of Acts 13:1-3, prophets and teachers at Antioch, at the Holy Spirit's direction,
8 set apart Barnabas and Saul to the work to which he had called them. After prayer and 9 fasting, the prophets and teachers laid (ἐπιτίθημι) their hands on Barnabas and Saul and sent
10 them off. This is clearly not an ordination in an ecclesiastical sense since Saul, also called 11 Paul, is already an apostle. Rather, the leaders of the church in Antioch commissioned 12 Barnabas and Saul for their task.

13 14 Καθίστημι

15
16 The relevant English definition for kathistemi is “to assign someone to a position of 17 authority, appoint, put in charge.” This definition is the sense of the verb in most of its New 18 Testament occurrences (Matt. 24:45, 47; Matt. 25:21, 23; Lk. 12:14, 42, 44; Acts 6:3; 7:10, 19 27, 35; Titus 1:5; Heb. 5:1; Heb. 7:28; Heb. 8:3). When it is used in the Septuagint, it also 20 regularly carries the sense of being set in authority over someone or something.

21
22 Thus, it is not surprising that when the apostles instruct the congregation in Acts 6 to select
23 seven men of good reputation, full of the Spirit and wisdom, they use kathistemi (Acts 6:3)
24 to indicate that they will appoint these men to the duty of serving the need that had arisen.
25 The seven were “in charge of the tables.” They were appointed to this duty by prayer and the 26 laying on of hands (ἐπιτίθημι). As stated in Chapter Two, although the seven are not called 27 deacons (diakonos), they do serve (diakoneo), so that Acts 6 marks the basis of diaconal
28 work—caring for widows, caring for the neglected.⁸¹

29
30 Additionally, Paul left Titus in Crete so that Titus would put what remained in order: to 31 appoint (kathistemi) elders in every town (Titus 1:5). Those elders would hold authority as 32 overseers in the churches (Titus 1:6).

33 34 Ποιέω

35
36 Among the most frequently utilized verbs in the New Testament, ποιέω is also very common
37 in the Septuagint. Its most common English glosses are to produce/make something 38 material, or to undertake to do something that brings about an event, state, or condition. It is 39 rarely glossed as “appointed” in the New Testament (Mark 3:14, 16; Heb. 3:2). In the Old
40 Testament, the ESV gloss for the Hebrew verb פָּשַׁע (‘śh) is “appointed” in 1 Samuel 12:6, 41 and the Septuagint gloss is ποιέω. In 1 Samuel 12:6, Samuel is speaking to the people of 42 Israel, telling them that the Lord appointed Moses and Aaron [to their “offices”]. In Mark

⁸¹ There are varying conclusions on the committee as to whether the seven men appointed in Acts 6 are the first deacons. The men are ordained, but they are not referred to as deacons. However, the committee is in agreement that this passage helps to form a pattern for diaconal ministry.

1 3:14 and 16, Mark is relating Jesus' appointing the twelve apostles. In Hebrews 3:2, the
 2 writer declares that Jesus was appointed by the Father to His office of "apostle and high
 3 priest of our confession."

4 5 Χειροτονέω

6
 7 This word occurs twice in the New Testament, and has no occurrences in the Septuagint.
 8 The English gloss is "to elect or choose someone for definite offices or tasks." In Acts
 9 14:23, Paul and Barnabas appoint (cheirotoneo) elders in the churches they planted. In 2
 10 Corinthians 8:19, Paul tells the Corinthians that Titus was appointed (cheirotoneo) by the 11 churches to travel with Paul as he collected money for the needy believers in Jerusalem. The 12 word indicates the congregation members stretched forth their hands.

13
 14 There are also examples of its use in extra-biblical church literature. For example, the 15 Didache uses the word to indicate that congregations are to elect their own overseers
 16 (episcopoi) and deacons (diakonoi): "Therefore appoint (cheirotoneo) for yourselves bishops
 17 and deacons worthy of the Lord, men who are humble and not avaricious and true and 18 approved, for they too carry out for you the ministry of the prophets and teachers. (2) You
 19 must not, therefore, despise them, for they are your honored men, along with the prophets 20 and teachers."⁸²

21
 22 The apostolic father, Ignatius, uses this word (I Phld. 10:1; I Sm. 11:2) when he writes to the 23 Philadelphians that they are to appoint a deacon to bring congratulations to the church at 24 Antioch: "Since it has been reported to me that in answer to your prayer and the compassion
 25 which you have in Christ Jesus the church at Antioch in Syria is at peace, it is appropriate
 26 for you, as a church of God, to appoint a deacon to go there on a mission as God's 27 ambassador, to congratulate them when they have assembled together and to glorify the 28 Name."⁸³

29 30 Conclusion

31
 32 Clearly, in Scripture, the laying on of hands includes more than ordination and the appointing 33 of people to roles. It denotes several other functions, such as: ●

- 34
35 1. Consecrating animals for sacrifice, ritual identification of sins, or sinners with the 36 sacrificial animal (Exod. 29:10, 15, 19; Lev. 1:4; Lev. 3:1, 2, 8., 13; Lev. 4:15, 24, 37 29, 33);
- 38 2. Commissioning a leader ([Joshua as successor to Moses commissioned by him] 39 Num. 27:23; Deut. 34:9);
- 40 3. Identifying a blasphemer before stoning him (Lev. 24:14);
- 41 4. Blessing children (Matt. 19:13; Mk. 10:16);
- 42 5. Setting apart Barnabas and Saul for the first missionary journey (Acts. 13:1-3);

⁸² Michael William Holmes, The Apostolic Fathers: Greek Texts and English Translations, Updated ed. (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Books, 1999), 267.

⁸³ Holmes, The Apostolic Fathers, 183.

- 1 6. Praying for believers to be filled with the Holy Spirit (Acts 8:17; Acts 9:19; Acts 2 19:9);
- 3 7. Praying for healing (Matt. 5:23; Matt. 8:23, 25; Mk. 6:5; Mk. 7:32; Mk. 16:18; Lk.
4 4:40; Lk. 13:33; Acts 28:8).

5
6 At the same time, the biblical data indicates that the BCO definition of ordination as, “the 7 authoritative admission of one duly called to an office in the Church of God, accompanied 8 with prayer and the laying on of hands, to which it is proper to add the giving of the right
9 hand of fellowship,” is on sure footing. Elders are ordained to an authoritative office within 10 the church. Furthermore, not all servants of the church are ordained. Some may be 11 commissioned to specific tasks. The ordination of deacons in Scripture rests heavily on 12 whether the seven men in Acts 6 are the first deacons. The Westminster Assembly evidently 13 considered them to be so, since it cited Acts 6 as a proof text for the office of deacon in the 14 Form of Government adopted by the Assembly. If the seven are deacons, then deacons are 15 also ordained to authoritative office as stewards of resources and mercy in the church.
16

17 What must be considered is the way Christ’s church has applied the Scripture’s described 18 and prescribed instruction on the diaconate as it relates to ordination and service.
19

20 THE DIACONATE: 21 ORDINATION AND SERVICE 22

23 The present perspective on ordination in the PCA’s Constitution has been shaped by several 24 factors, including:
25

- 26 1. The Old Testament Scriptures, particularly those related to the respective roles of 27 men and women, and the roles of priests, elders, and prophets.
- 28 2. The New Testament Scriptures, particularly those that deal with the roles of men and 29 women in the life of the ministry of the early church, both the prescriptive passages 30 and the descriptive passages.
- 31 3. The theological-historical development of the church, particularly the PCA’s branch
32 of the church. Of special interest are the documents of the early church, the mediaeval
33 Western church, the Protestant Reformation, the restoration of Presbyterian polity 34 among Reformed churches, and Presbyterianism in America leading up to the 35 founding of the PCA.
- 36 4. The interaction between Christianity, the church, and the historical-cultural situation 37 throughout history. Unfortunately, examples abound of how portions of the church at 38 particular periods have allowed their surrounding culture to supersede the Scriptures
39 on some issues. Two regrettable examples from Presbyterian history are the 40 justification of chattel slavery and racial segregation in America. When it comes to 41 the role of women in society and in the church, the committee desires to evaluate 42 today’s culture by the Scriptures and realizes that Christians are susceptible to 43 interpreting Scripture through a cultural lens instead of interpreting culture through 44 Scripture’s lens.

45 A thorough examination of the Scriptures is detailed in Chapter Two of this report, with an 46 additional analysis in the first part of Chapter Three. What follows is a brief examination of 47 the theological-historical development of the diaconate in the church, with an emphasis on

1 the role of women in that ministry. Although the word “deaconess” is not found in Scripture,
2 it has been the most common word in the history of the church to identify women serving in
3 diaconate ministry. The text below follows that utilization.

4 The Role of Deaconesses in the History of the Church

6
7 The ancient church era offers helpful information and insights. Several documents instruct 8 on the existence, duties, and ministry of deaconesses in the ancient church.

9
10 One of the earliest extra-biblical references to women serving as deaconesses in the church
11 is Letter 96 from Pliny the Younger (d. AD 113) to the Emperor Trajan. Pliny was a Roman 12 government official who wrote to the emperor regarding the growth of Christianity in 13 Bithynia and attempted to suppress Christianity by torturing believers. He wrote, “I judged 14 it so much the more necessary to extract the real truth, with the assistance of torture, from 15 two female slaves, who were styled deaconesses: but I could discover nothing more than 16 depraved and excessive superstition.”⁸⁴

17
18 The Apostolic Constitutions, compiled from the second to the early fifth centuries (showing
19 dependence upon the Teaching of the Twelve Apostles, from the late first to early second 20 century) mentions deaconesses in several places.

21
22 Book II, Section IV addresses the management of resources collected for the support of the 23 clergy and the relief of the poor. Chapter XXVI explains the pattern and dignity God
24 appoints to every order of the clergy. The bishop is the minister of the word, who presides as 25 one honored with the authority of God. Then:

26
27 let the deacon minister to him, as Christ does to His Father; and let him serve
28 him unblameably in all things, as Christ does nothing of Himself, but does 29 always those things that please His Father. Let also the deaconess be 30 honoured by you in the place of the Holy Ghost, and not do or say anything
31 without the deacon; as neither does the Comforter say or do anything of 32 Himself, but gives glory to Christ by waiting for His pleasure. And as we 33 cannot believe on Christ without the teaching of the Spirit, so let not any 34 woman address herself to the deacon or bishop without the deaconess.⁸⁵

35
36 Book II, Section VII—On Assembling in the Church—describes the church, the clergy, and 37 the responsibilities people have in worship services. The bishop sits in the middle. The 38 presbyters sit on each side of him. The deacons “stand near at hand.”⁸⁶ The laity is to sit ⁸⁴ Pliny, Letters, Vols. 1 & 2, ed. T. E. Page et al., trans. William Melmoth, The Loeb Classical Library (London; New York: William Heinemann; The Macmillan Co., 1931), 2:405.

⁸⁵ Alexander Roberts, James Donaldson, and A. Cleveland Coxe, eds., “Constitutions of the Holy Apostles,” in Fathers of the Third and Fourth Centuries: Lactantius, Venantius, Asterius, Victorinus, Dionysius, Apostolic Teaching and Constitutions, Homily, and Liturgies, trans. James Donaldson, The Ante-Nicene Fathers (Buffalo, NY: Christian Literature Company, 1886), 7:410.

⁸⁶ Ibid., 421.

1 quietly and in good order. The women sit by themselves in the same manner. Then, as the
2 aspects of the service are described, it says:

3
4 And while the Gospel is read, let all the presbyters and deacons, and all the 5 people, stand up in great silence; for it is written: "Be silent, and hear, O
6 Israel." And again: "But do thou stand there, and hear." In the next place, let 7 the presbyters one by one, not all together, exhort the people, and the bishop
8 in the last place, as being the commander. Let the porters stand at the entries
9 of the men, and observe them. Let the deaconesses also stand at those of the 10 women, like shipmen. For the same description and pattern was both in the 11 tabernacle of the testimony and in the temple of God.⁸⁷

12
13 Presbyters, deacons, deaconesses, men, women, and young people stood as groups while the 14 aged and infirm were allowed to sit.

15
16 Further, in Book III, Section II of the Apostolic Constitutions, instructions are given on the 17 ordination of deaconesses, specifying that they baptize other women for modesty's sake as 18 baptism evidently involved disrobing, total immersion, and receiving a white robe:

19
20 Ordain also a deaconess who is faithful and holy, for ministrations toward 21 women. For sometimes [the bishop] cannot send a deacon, who is a man, to 22 the women, on account of unbelievers. Thou shalt therefore send a woman, a 23 deaconess, on account of the imaginations of the bad. For we stand in need of 24 a woman, a deaconess, for many necessities; and first in the baptism of 25 women, the deacon shall anoint only their forehead with the holy oil, and 26 after him the deaconess shall anoint them: for there is no necessity that 27 women should be seen by men.⁸⁸

28
29 Deaconesses ministered to other women and even baptized them. The same section 30 describes the actual baptism:

31
32 After that [anointing with oil], either thou, O bishop, or a presbyter that is 33 under thee, shall in the solemn form name over them the Father, and Son, and 34 Holy Spirit, shall dip them in the water; and let a deacon receive the man, and 35 a deaconess the woman, that so the conferring of this inviolable seal may take 36 place with a becoming decency. And after that, let the bishop anoint those 37 that are baptized with ointment.⁸⁹

38
39 Evidently, women were baptized out of the sight of men. Women then went into the room
40 where the church was assembled, and the presiding minister received them into the church.

⁸⁷ Ibid.

⁸⁸ Ibid., 431.

⁸⁹ Ibid.

1 In Book VIII, Section III, chs. XIX and XX of the Apostolic Constitutions, instructions are 2 given on procedures for ordaining a deaconess and the wording of the prayer, after 3 instructions on ordaining a deacon are given:

4
 5 Concerning a deaconesses, I Bartholomew make this constitution: O bishop, thou
 6 shalt lay thy hands upon her in the presence of the presbytery, and of the deacons and 7 the deaconesses and shalt say:— O Eternal God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,
 8 the Creator of man and of woman, who didst replenish with the Spirit Miriam, and 9 Deborah, and Anna, and Huldah; who did not disdain that Thy only begotten Son 10 should be born of a woman; who also in the tabernacle of the testimony, and in the 11 temple, didst ordain women to be the keepers of Thy holy gates, :—do Thou now
 12 look upon this Thy servant, who is to be ordained to the office of a deaconess, and 13 grant her Thy Holy Spirit and, “cleanse her from all filthiness of flesh and spirit,”
 14 that she may worthily discharge the work that is committed to her to Thy glory, and 15 the praise of Thy Christ, with whom glory and adoration be to Thee and the Holy 16 Spirit for ever. Amen.⁹⁰

17
 18 Though the committee believes that Presbyterian polity has roots in the Old Testament, the 19 synagogue, and the New Testament, most church historians recognize that nascent
 20 episcopacy arose quite early in the life of the ancient church and developed in stages
 21 because of several factors over the first five centuries of the church, and that Presbyterian
 22 polity was not restored until the Reformation in the 16th century.

23
 24 The New Testament uses the terms elder/presbyter and bishop/overseer as synonyms. An 25 Anglican bishop and New Testament and patristics scholar, J. B. Lightfoot argues, in an 26 appendix to his commentary on the Greek text of Philippians, for the synonymous use of the 27 terms.⁹¹

28
 29 Elder/bishop, a term more familiar to Jews, indicated spiritual maturity and bishop/overseer,
 30 a term more familiar to Gentiles for civil servants, was descriptive of function. Over time, a
 31 hierarchal system developed with three levels of ministers: deacon, presbyter, and bishop,
 32 eventuating with the bishop of Rome functioning as a pope (Damasus, r. A.D. 366-384). Leo
 33 the Great was the first to use the title of pope (r. 440-461). The deacon of the New 34 Testament era soon became an entry-level clergy position as hierarchy began developing in 35 the second century. Yet, as previously evidenced in the Apostolic Constitutions, deaconesses
 36 arose early in the life of the church and continued, especially in the eastern churches.
 37 Although it died out over time, in the Reformation, the role of deaconess was revived.

38
 39 Different church traditions in various eras determined how deaconesses were to be ordained.
 40 In the history of the church, there were definite instances of deaconesses being ordained in 41 the early centuries, and yet, later there were direct prohibitions of the ordination of ⁹⁰ Ibid., 492.

⁹¹ Joseph Barber Lightfoot, ed., Saint Paul's Epistle to the Philippians, Classic Commentaries on the Greek New Testament (London: Macmillan and Co., Ltd, 1913), 193–195.

1 deaconesses. This may be explained by the development of hierarchal polity, by the
2 sacerdotal understanding of presbyter/priest and bishop that evolved, and by the esteem
3 celibacy enjoyed resulting in more women becoming nuns.

4
5 The exact meaning of the ordination of deaconesses and when it took place is somewhat
6 uncertain. The clergy lists from the first three centuries include deacons, presbyters, and 7 bishops but also sub-deacons, deaconesses, exorcists, readers, musicians, and porters.
8 Eventually, deacons, presbyters, and bishops were considered the major clergy, and sub-
9 deacons, deaconesses, exorcists, readers, musicians, and porters were considered the minor
10 clergy (recognized servants of the church).

11
12 The regional and ecumenical councils of the church and the gatherings of colleges of 13 bishops dealt with doctrinal issues, dealt with practical issues, and issued canons. The First
14 Ecumenical Council of Nicaea (AD 325) produced a creed and a number of canons. Canon 19
15 dealt with deaconesses: “And we mean by deaconesses such as have assumed the habit, but 16 who, since they have no imposition of hands, are to be numbered among the laity.”⁹²
17 Evidently, “habit” was an early reference to nuns who began to wear distinctive clothing.

18
19 A regional council, the Council of Orange (AD 441) in Gaul (France), issued thirty canons
20 (one canon encouraged celibacy for deacons, presbyters, and bishops). Canon 26 explicitly 21 forbade the ordination of deaconesses.⁹³ The Synods of Arles affirmed the Council of 22 Orange’s canons in 443.

23
24 The Council of Chalcedon (AD 451), the Fourth Ecumenical Council mostly known for its 25 definition of the person of Christ, also issued a canon (Canon XV) that a woman must be at 26 least forty-years-old to be ordained as a deaconess.⁹⁴

27
28 In the Arabian Peninsula, as Christianity flourished before the rise of Islam, Dr. Robert L.
29 Wilkens points out, “By the sixth century there was a well-established Arabic-speaking
30 Christian community in Najran with a full ecclesiastical organization, bishop, presbyters, 31 deacons, and deaconesses.”⁹⁵

32
33 By the time of the Emperor Justinian (d. 565), the Hagia Sophia listed forty deaconesses
34 who served the church.

35
36 The regional Council of Trullo, held in Constantinople in 692, issued a canon on age
37 requirements for ordination. Canon 14 says, “Let the canon of our holy God-bearing Fathers
38 be confirmed in this particular also; that a presbyter be not ordained before he is thirty years
39 of age, even if he be a very worthy man, but let him be kept back. For our Lord Jesus Christ

⁹² Henry R. Percival, “The Canons of the 318 Holy Fathers Assembled in the City of Nice, in Bithynia,” in The Seven Ecumenical Councils, ed. Philip Schaff and Henry Wace, A Select Library of the Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church, Second Series (New York: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1900), 14:40.

⁹³ Ibid., 42.

⁹⁴ Ibid., 279.

⁹⁵ Robert L. Wilken, The First Thousand Years: A Global History of Christianity, (New Haven, CT and London, UK: Yale University Press, 2012), 218.

1 was baptized and began to teach when he was thirty. In like manner let no deacon be
2 ordained before he is twenty-five, nor a deaconess before she is forty.”

3
4 The position of deaconesses died out over time, particularly in the Western church, for 5 several reasons: 1) the rise of hierarchy (episcopacy) in which deacon became an entry-level
6 office leading to presbyter; 2) the rise of a sacerdotal (priestly) view of the role of clergy and 7 a resultant categorization of major and minor clergy with deaconesses being minor; 3) the 8 growth of the role of nuns doing many of the mercy ministries formerly done by deaconesses
9 as celibacy became more highly esteemed, particularly in the Western church; 4) with the 10 spread of Christianity, most baptisms became infant baptisms, coupled with the preference 11 for effusion (without a change of clothing) over immersion (which involved a change of 12 clothing), so that deaconesses no longer baptized women for modesty’s sake.

13
14 The Council of Trent of the Roman Catholic Church (1545-1563) forbade the ordination of 15 deaconesses because they did not have priestly functions. In May of 2017, however, Pope
16 Francis announced that he was establishing a commission to study the possible reintroduction
17 of deaconesses into the Roman Catholic Church.

18
19 When John Calvin revived Presbyterian polity in sixteenth-century Geneva, he restored the 20 collegial government of a plurality of elders, and restored the office of deacon to its New 21 Testament nature as a ministry of mercy. The church at Geneva also had deaconesses who 22 served under the deacons and ministered especially to women and children.⁹⁶ Calvin saw 23 deacons as having two primary tasks based on Romans 12:8: 1) distribution of alms and 24 financial management, and 2) care for the poor and the sick. Calvin viewed deaconesses as 25 enrolled widows, based on 1 Timothy 5. There is no indication that the deaconesses of Geneva 26 were ordained, though they had official ecclesiastical roles and evidently served under the 27 leadership of the ordained, male deacons.

28
29 In nineteenth century Germany, there was a renewal of unordained deaconesses in the 30 Lutheran tradition. In 1836 the Rev. Theodore Fleidner and his wife opened a deaconess
31 mother house in Kaiser Werth on the Rhine. Scandinavian Lutherans then established
32 deaconesses. American Lutherans followed suit and began to encourage deaconess service.
33 Clara Barton used Lutheran deaconess nurses in the Civil War. In 1888, Deaconess Hospital
34 was established in Cincinnati. In 1895, a Lutheran deaconess training center was established
35 in Baltimore.

36
37 In the Church of England, Elizabeth Catherine Ferard visited Kaiser Werth. With the Bishop
38 of London’s approval, she founded the North London Deaconess Institution, and received
39 (unordained) deaconess License Number One from the Bishop of London.⁹⁷ In 1887,
40 Isabelle Gilmore founded an order of Anglican deaconesses not living in community. Lady
41 Grissel Baillie was recognized as a deaconess Church of Scotland (unordained) in the Church
42 of Scotland in 1888. Deaconess Hospital was opened in Edinburgh in 1894 to honor her.⁹⁸

⁹⁶ See Calvin’s Institutes of the Christian Religion, Bk. 4: Ch. 3: Sec. 9; and 4:13:15-19.

⁹⁷ <https://forallsaints.wordpress.com/2011/07/18/elizabeth-ferard-deaconess-1883>

⁹⁸ <https://www.charteriscentre.com/history> and <https://archive.org/details/b21709944>

1 In 1889 Lucy Rider Meyer M.D. led in the reviving of the office of unordained deaconess in
2 the American Methodist Episcopal Church that eventually founded New England Deaconess
3 Hospital in Boston in 1896.⁹⁹

4
5 Further:

- 6 • In 1901, Mennonites founded Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society in 7 Beatrice, Kansas, that continues to this day.¹⁰⁰
- 8 • After the 19th century resurgence, deaconesses both declined and diversified from 9 primarily medical roles in the 20th century. The decline was due to several factors:
 - 10 • An increase in professional nurses' schools in state colleges and universities, 11 and nursing schools associated with secular hospitals.
 - 12 • An increase in state-run schools of social work and the professionalization of 13 social work.
 - 14 • The "Great Reversal" or conservative withdrawal from many aspects of social 15 service in reaction to the social gospel movement during the fundamentalist-
16 modernist controversy between WWI and WWII.
 - 17 • The growth of women's ordination to all offices in the mainline denominations.
- 18 • The diversification occurred in the 20th century as unordained deaconesses moved 19 beyond being nurses or social workers. For example, unordained deaconesses in the 20 Lutheran Deaconess Association (LCMS and ELCA) serve in a number of functions
21 to express the compassion of the Lord Jesus Christ.¹⁰¹ For example:
 - 22 • Medical service as physicians, nurses, midwives, physical therapists, and 23 occupational therapists.
 - 24 • Teaching from pre-K to the professional and graduate levels.
 - 25 • Music ministry.
 - 26 • Administration in the local church or non-profit organizations.
 - 27 • Campus ministry to women.
 - 28 • Institutional ministry in hospitals, hospices, jails, and prisons.
 - 29 • Legal services to and advocacy for the poor as lawyers or paralegals.
 - 30 • Cross-cultural or inner-city missionaries in the US and abroad.
 - 31 • Educational mentors to the disadvantaged.
 - 32 • Geriatric care.

33
34 This brief survey from the ancient church era to the twentieth century demonstrates that in 35 the various branches of Christ's church, women have served a vital, necessary, and varied
36 role in diaconate ministry. While there have been periods and denominations when women
37 were ordained to this service, what has been most consistent is that they were recognized, 38 screened, and set apart for it.

⁹⁹ <https://www.britannica.com/biography/Lucy-Jane-Rider-Meyer>

¹⁰⁰ <https://www.bethelks.edu/alumni/alumni-association/bethel-college-nursing-alumni-association/history-of-the-bethel-deaconess-hospital/>

¹⁰¹ <http://www.thelda.org/about/history.php>

1 It is a commendable and necessary task to identify, encourage, equip, and empower women
2 to the full use of their gifts in the gathered assembly of God's people and the scattered
3 ministry of God's people as the church fulfills both the Great Commission and the Great
4 Commandment. Additionally, the full use of gifts must not be defined or implemented in 5 any way that undermines the roles and responsibilities of men and women in the church and
6 the family or contradicts biblical exhortations and prohibitions. In a word, the biblically
7 defined complementarian relationship of men and women in the family and church is to be 8 embraced (including ordination as the PCA has defined it), and inconsistent practices should 9 not undermine or contradict it.

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

CHAPTER FOUR
ENCOURAGING A ROBUST AND GRACIOUS COMPLEMENTARIAN PRACTICE

5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15

Gen. 1:27-30 So God created man in his own image, in the image of God he created him; male and female he created them. And God blessed them. And God said to them, “Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth and subdue it, and have dominion over the fish of the sea and over the birds of the heavens and over every living thing that moves on the earth.” And God said, “Behold, I have given you every plant yielding seed that is on the face of all the earth, and every tree with seed in its fruit. You shall have them for food. And to every beast of the earth and to every bird of the heavens and to everything that creeps on the earth, everything that has the breath of life, I have given every green plant for food.” And it was so.

16
17
18
19

Gal. 3:27-28 For as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is no male and female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus.

20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

The infallible rule for the church’s faith and practice is the Word of God. The first thing the Bible declares about human beings is that they are made in the image of God. God speaks in Genesis 1:26, “Let us make man in our image, after our likeness.” God’s church gladly confesses that by the renewal of the Spirit, she ever more reflects the glory of God (Eph. 3:19; Eph. 4:23-24), who eternally exists as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Indeed, the confession of the Trinity is the heartbeat of the Christian religion.¹⁰² No analogies in the surrounding world adequately convey the Christian doctrine of the Trinity.¹⁰³ The most fitting analogy available is God’s declaration that humanity is made in His image.

29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38

The declaration in Genesis 1 establishes humanity’s unique place in God’s kingdom. God has given people the unique role of image-bearer.¹⁰⁴ This means that individual human beings possess inherent dignity and worth. Further, this inherent dignity and worth is particularly declared of humanity as male and female. Herman Bavinck reinforces this high position of men and women when he highlights, “in accordance with Scripture and the Reformed confession, the idea that a human being does not bear or have the image of God but that he or she is the image of God.”¹⁰⁵ Men and women are truly and essentially human only because they are the image of God. For Bavinck, all other creatures display vestiges of God. Only a human being is the image of God:

¹⁰² Herman Bavinck, Bolt, and Vriend, Reformed Dogmatics: God and Creation, trans., John Vriend, ed. John Bolt (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2008), 258.

¹⁰³ Robert Letham, The Holy Trinity: In Scripture, History, Theology, and Worship (Phillipsburg, NJ: P & R Publishing, 2004), 6.

¹⁰⁴ Richard Pratt, Designed for Dignity: What God Has Made It Possible for You to Be (Phillipsburg, NJ: P&R Publishing, 2000), 7.

¹⁰⁵ Bavinck, 554.

1 The image of God is much too rich for it to be fully realized in a single human
 2 being, however richly gifted that human being may be. It can only be 3 somewhat unfolded in its depth and riches in a humanity counting billions of 4 members. Just as the traces of God (vestigia Dei) are spread over many, many
 5 works, in both space and time, so also the image of God can only be displayed
 6 in all its dimensions and characteristic features in a humanity whose members
 7 exist both successively one after the other and contemporaneously side by 8 side...Only humanity in its entirety—as one complete organism, summed up
 9 under a single head, spread out over the whole earth, as prophet proclaiming
 10 the truth of God, as priest dedicating itself to God, as ruler controlling the 11 earth and the whole of creation—only it is the fully finished image, the most
 12 telling and striking likeness of God.¹⁰⁶

13
 14 Human beings image God individually but most strikingly as a community. The commands
 15 of Genesis 1:28-30 are tied to how humanity images God. To multiply and fill the earth and 16 to exercise dominion are all impossible to carry out as solitary individuals. In creation, 17 human destiny is in community because humanity images the triune God who lives in 18 community as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Nonna Harrison rightly points this truth out 19 when she says, “The unity of humankind is an important facet of the image of God, who is 20 one. Humankind is a multiplicity of persons who are united in one body, just as God is three 21 persons united in one essence.”¹⁰⁷ Thus, when humanity is united in loving community, it
 22 reflects the inner life of the triune God.

23
 24 God’s first and primary example of a united, loving community imaging Him was male and 25 female together. They are equal in value, worth, and dignity while simultaneously different.
 26 Genesis 1:26-27 records the distinction between male and female, before sin permeated their 27 being and wrought corruption. Therefore, the difference between male and female is a gift to 28 be celebrated, not a handicap to be hidden. Further, because men and women are meant to 29 complement one another in the creation order, each must be able to flourish in the context of 30 covenant community.

31
 32 Some have argued that, in the new covenant community, those complementarian differences
 33 are dissolved. This conclusion is drawn from texts like Galatians 3:28. While Paul’s words
 34 are central to understanding the equality of all believers in Christ as “sons of God,” they do
 35 not obliterate distinctions and differences. The “RPCES Study Committee Report on the 36 Role of Women in the Church (1976)” summarized the concept well:

37
 38 Because all are thus shut up to sin and can be saved only by faith, all come 39 before God on equal footing, their race, sex, or state of bondage (Jew/Greek, 40 male/female, bond/free) having no effect whatsoever on their right to stand 41 before God. It is in this frame of reference that Paul declares, “You are all 42 sons of God through faith in Christ, for as many of you as were baptized into ¹⁰⁶ Ibid.

¹⁰⁷ Nonna Harrison, God's Many-Splendored Image: Theological Anthropology for Christian Formation (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Academic, 2010), 173.

1 Christ did put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither
2 bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for you are all one in Christ
3 Jesus. And if you are Christ's, then you are Abraham's seed, heirs according 4 to the promise.¹⁰⁸
5

6 The new covenant does not seek to overcome the distinctions between men and women.
7 Rather, it affirms, as does all of Scripture, that all people come before God on equal footing
8 by faith with no privileges afforded by race, gender, or ethnicity. The oneness that the 9 apostle speaks to here and elsewhere (cf. Eph. 4:4-7; Col. 3:11) is to be demonstrated in 10 practice within the church.
11

12 From the beginning, man and woman, who were designed to be God worshipers (Gen. 2:3, 13 16, 17; Exod. 20:11), enjoyed perfect harmony with God and with one another. The act of 14 disobedience to God's command (non-worship of God, worship of self) brought about 15 immediate and devastating effects. Though still recognizable, the image of God in sinful
16 man and woman was shattered. God's law is perfect, and is meant to regulate people's 17 thoughts, words, and actions. When people obey God's commands, that obedience is an 18 expression of and in harmony with God's perfection. This standard of behavior, found in the 19 image of God, "makes it possible for [us] to have [our] life and conduct patterned after the 20 exemplar which the attitude and actions of God provide, that is, an intrinsic affinity, depraved
21 and perverted by the fall, yet not obliterated."¹⁰⁹ Since the fall, every relationship has 22 evidence of brokenness. Every image-bearer has need of a Savior.
23

24 Geerhardus Vos explains that the doctrine of the image of God "is of the utmost moment for 25 soteriology—... God's work of grace ... must renovate the image in man."¹¹⁰ The grace-
26 wrought restoration of the image of God is an important part of salvation. In Christ, there is 27 hope of renewal. People are reconciled to God. He is actively restoring that broken image of 28 Himself in every believer. He is at work making relationships whole and healthy, "[a]nd we 29 all, with unveiled face, beholding the glory of the Lord, are being transformed into the same
30 image from one degree of glory to another" (2 Cor. 3:18).
31

32 Redeemed men and women with equal value, worth, and standing in the covenant community
33 of God are privileged to live out distinctive male and female roles with responsibilities
34 which complement one another and bring glory to Creator God.¹¹¹ Part of the way this 35 occurs is as the gifts God gives to men and women are given room to flourish within the 36 bounds of the distinctions declared in His Word. By following God's design, men and 37 women find both personal fulfillment and spiritual growth because it is His goal to make 38 them like their Savior: "Thus the process of sanctification can be described in its richest 39 meaning as transformation into the image of Christ."¹¹² What was broken at the fall is being

¹⁰⁸ "RPCES Study Committee Report on the Role of Women in the Church (1976)," accessed December 1, 2016, <http://www.pcahistory.org/findingaids/rpces/docsynod/390.html>, 4.

¹⁰⁹ John Murray, Collected Writings of John Murray: Systematic Theology (Banner of Truth, 1982), 2:38.

¹¹⁰ Geerhardus Vos, Reformed Dogmatics: Anthropology (Bellingham, WA: Lexham Press, 2016), 2:15.

¹¹¹ "Now the great thing is this: we are consecrated and dedicated to God in order that we may thereafter think, speak, meditate, and do, nothing except to his glory." John Calvin, Institutes of Christian Religion, 1:690.

¹¹² Murray, 2:310.

1 restored through His commitment to remake men and women in His image: “I appeal to you
2 therefore, brothers, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies as a living sacrifice, holy
3 and acceptable to God, which is your spiritual worship” (Rom.12:1).

4 5 Various Complementarian Practices in the PCA

6
7 While upholding a complementarian view of women’s role in the church’s ministries,
8 practices within the PCA vary as sessions wrestle with this question of biblical fidelity and
9 encouraging women in their churches to use their gifts to God’s glory and for the church’s
10 edification. Though many ministries among women and children exist where women have 11 universal opportunities to use their gifts, a variety of practices are available to women in 12 teaching ministries, through diaconal work, and in public worship.

13 14 The Teaching Ministries

15
16 Generally, churches within the PCA fall into one of three different practices with regard to 17 women teaching in the church. (1) Some churches provide qualified women teaching
18 opportunities only to women and/or children and under the session’s authority. (2) Some 19 churches permit qualified women to teach mixed gender groups with her husband or an elder
20 and under the session’s authority. (3) Some churches permit qualified women to teach mixed
21 adult gender groups under the session’s authority.

22 23 The Diaconal Work

24
25 Again, churches within the PCA generally fall into one of three different practices with 26 regard to the involvement of women in diaconal work. (1) Some churches only permit
27 ordained men to perform diaconal work in the church in any formal way. This does not 28 mean these churches exclude women from coming alongside deacons while ministering to 29 single women, mercy ministries, et cetera. However, there is no formal role or intentional
30 process to encourage women to serve in diaconal work. (2) Some churches have created a
31 formal role for qualified women to serve in diaconal work. These churches’ sessions either 32 appoint and/or commission qualified women for this work. These women are often given the 33 title “deacon assistant” or “deaconess.” This practice is already permitted in the BCO.
34 (3) Some churches have chosen not to have a formal diaconate and instead have qualified
35 lay men and women serve together performing the diaconal work in their churches. Though
36 this practice is not specifically prohibited by the BCO, it seems poorly aligned with the spirit
37 of the two offices of the church outlined in the BCO.

38 39 Public Worship

40
41 And finally, churches within the PCA generally fall into one of three different practices with 42 regard to the involvement of women in the public worship services of the local churches.
43 (1) Some churches have no leadership roles for the laity, and thus their women, in their 44 worship services. (2) Some churches open some roles in their public worship service to 45 laity, and thus their women, including leading the congregation in singing, taking up

1 offerings, reading Scripture, distributing elements in the Lord’s Supper, leading in prayers,
2 making announcements, et cetera. (3) Some churches open roles for women in their worship
3 services by restricting the preaching, and sometimes the reading of the Scriptures, to 4 ordained men and then stating that all other roles in public worship are open to the church’s
5 qualified men and women members.

7 Identifying and Making Room for Women’s Gifts and Abilities to Flourish

8
9 The committee is hopeful that faithful elders are already exerting themselves to identify and 10 find ways to utilize the gifts and abilities of women in their congregation. Doing so
11 contributes to their personal flourishing, and also the health of entire body. However, at least 12 two disturbing trends cause the committee to conclude that more pastors and sessions need to 13 be intentional about focusing on women’s spiritual lives and ministries in their congregations.

14 The Problem

15
16
17 As one example, some on social media have asserted that women's ministries can be seen as 18 a relegation of women to a secondary place, rather than a healthy functioning as part of the 19 whole. The local church’s women’s ministry can therefore be marginalized, causing their 20 efforts to be trivialized. The vision and mission of women’s ministries should “reflect the 21 total philosophy, purpose, and goals”¹¹³ of the local church. But, instead of being 22 “intentional and strategic” in this mission, women’s meetings often become social clubs
23 which neither “teach women to think biblically” nor “build community with other members, 24 age groups and ministries of the church.”¹¹⁴

25
26 Further, women are increasingly turning to para-church ministries, both for instruction 27 (which is often theologically suspect) and to exercise their gifts (with no oversight from 28 elders.) In fact, it is the rare pastor who knows the names of the women who loom large in 29 para-church “women’s ministries,” much less the conferences, websites, blogs, and curriculum 30 that women are turning to in the absence of intentional oversight and nourishment from their 31 sessions. This lack of shepherding and oversight can also be the result of failed women’s 32 ministry as mentioned previously. Women will seek a relational context for their faith, and if 33 they do not find substance in the context of their local church, they will seek it elsewhere.
34 This applies to women of ethnic minority and majority cultures alike. For example, one
35 African American woman explained,

36
37 I have credible seminal ideas, built on sound orthodoxy. I’m under no suspicion
38 of heresy. I write freely for a number of publications. And yet, I’ve since 39 decided to go into government think tanks and foreign policy - there's more
40 freedom there than is afforded me by my own denomination.¹¹⁵

¹¹³ Susan Hunt, Women’s Ministry Training and Resource Guide (CE&P, 2007), 110-111.

¹¹⁴ Ibid.

¹¹⁵ This was part of a response to the committee’s survey question, “What have been your primary blessings and challenges as an African American woman in the PCA?”

1 It is important to note that the ethnic minority women whom the committee contacted
 2 expressed gratitude for the PCA's doctrinal integrity, the polity which allows for checks and
 3 balances in church governance, the emphasis on the doctrines of God's glorious grace, and 4 the ability to make relationships with Christian sisters from various cultures and economic 5 standings. Yet, they encouraged the denomination to do more than simply "allow" or 6 "tolerate" women in ministry. Rather, they encouraged the PCA to invite and involve
 7 women to participate wherever and whenever possible.

8
 9 Finally, women in the PCA may face an identity crisis. This identity crisis is related to the 10 spiritual characteristic of a woman's role of submission. Unless her submission to the 11 session's headship is treated with honor and tenderness, she begins to lose sight of its worth
 12 and her Lord's delight in her exercise of it.

13 The Solution

14
 15 Remember the foundational structure. The Creator God has designed His people to flourish
 16 in certain environments, and they will struggle in environments not designed for them. In 17 order for women in the church to flourish, and the church as a whole to flourish, its officers
 18 and its members (in this case particularly, its women) must support and encourage one
 19 another, with adherence to the order and structure determined for the church. With Christ as 20 the Shepherd and Overseer of our souls (1 Pet. 2:25), our Head (Eph. 1:22-23), and our King
 21 (Rev. 19:16), men and women must strive together in grace-driven obedience (Rom. 6:14)
 22 and allegiance to His rule. Male and female interdependence is a key element of the 23 structure of the local church, for "in the Lord woman is not independent of man nor man of 24 woman; for as woman was made from man, so man is now born of woman. And all things
 25 are from God" (1 Cor. 11:11-12).

26
 27
 28 For the sake of Christ and His church, the committee encourages all women in the local 29 church, as an exhibition of their love of God and neighbor (1 John 5:2-3), intentionally to:

- 30
 31 ● recognize and honor the authority and rule given to the elders of the church and 32 strive to support, help, and obey them as God has placed these male leaders over 33 them (Heb. 13:7, 9, 17).
- 34 ● avoid contempt for or disparagement toward the male leadership (Eph. 4:29; 2 35 Tim. 2:14; Titus 2:3).
- 36 ● commit themselves to humble service, doing what is needed in every area of 37 service which Scripture allows, seeking to honor their Master who came "not to 38 be served, but to serve" (Matt. 20:28; Gal. 5:13; James 4:10; 1 Pet. 2:16).
- 39 ● develop and utilize their God-given gifts in ways that uphold the structure of the 40 church and the family, express love and unity with others, and undergird the 41 pulpit ministry (Rom. 12; 1 Cor. 13:1-14:1; Eph. 4:1-16; Eph. 5:22-24).

42
 43 For the sake of Christ and His church (which church includes the women who are committed 44 to fulfill their role in the above exhortation), the committee encourages the elders in each 45 local church, as an exhibition of their love for God and neighbor, intentionally to:

- 1 ● recognize and honor the women who are under their authority as vital members
2 of the body of Christ, leading them as shepherds who must give an account (1
3 Cor.11:11; Gal. 3:28; Heb. 13:17).
- 4 ● feed them sound doctrine and provide direction and nourishment for their souls
5 (John 21:15-17; Titus 1:9; Titus 2:1).
- 6 ● protect them from false doctrine and false teaching (Acts 20:28-30; 1 John 4:1).
- 7 ● neither demean nor discourage them (Rom. 12:10; 1 Cor. 12:26).
- 8 ● provide opportunities for the development and utilization of women's gifts in 9 every area of service that Scripture allows (Eph. 4:15-16).
- 10 ● foster an atmosphere of trust and respect for their office under Christ by living 11 trustworthily and honorably, showing true concern and gentle care for those 12 entrusted to them (Titus 2:7-8; 1 Peter 5:2-3).

14 The Process

15
16 As with any person in the church, in order to identify gifts that a layman or laywoman may 17 have for the nourishment of Christ's body, that person must have an opportunity to exhibit
18 giftedness in an area by ministering in it. Quite often, a person's gifts may be discovered
19 through an intentional training process that is a further opportunity to foster community.

20
21 Many women and men are understandably reluctant to attempt something they have never 22 done previously, so the committee suggests that invitations to participate in some area of 23 church ministry be given a specific time frame. For instance, "Would you be willing to give 24 the talks to children's church for the month of April?" or "Would you volunteer to meet with 25 the deacons 3 or 4 times to help them with some of the people they are working with, using 26 your financial planning (or nutritional/education/whatever) expertise?"

27
28 There are a great number of books and articles available that lay out the way a pastor (or a 29 manager, in a secular setting) can discover and promote the gifts of those of whom he is in 30 charge. The ground is well trodden.

31
32 Next, women whose gifts are already identified, and especially those who have had 33 theological training, experience on the mission field, or other ministry experience, need their 34 pastors and elders to find appropriate ways for those gifts to be used within their churches.
35 The committee would like to stem the tide of women gravitating toward para-church 36 ministries or personal blogs rather than finding a place within their own churches to 37 minister. This may entail hiring a woman for a non-ordained staff position, or inviting 38 women to advisory positions, to give announcements, or to participate other ways in the 39 worship service. Women should also be encouraged to grow in their knowledge of God and 40 the church through seminary courses and training sessions offered by CDM.¹¹⁶ While each
41 session must determine what the non-negotiable biblical guidelines are, the committee
42

¹¹⁶ Women who have seminary training should also be trained to counsel women. Equipped women could handle more effectively many of the unique problems women are facing. Hunt and Hutcheson, Leadership for Women in the Church (Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan, 1991), 143.

1 encourages ruling and teaching elders to observe faithfully all the biblical teaching about the
2 range of ways in which women may use their gifts, and not to be bound by traditions that 3 may be merely cultural.

4 5 Encouraging Staff Roles for Qualified Women Working with the Church's Session

6
7 Any women holding staff positions in a church would have the same relationship to the 8 session as non-ordained men who fill staff positions, such as but not limited to: attending 9 session meetings to report or receive instruction; executing the session's vision in the 10 positions for which they have been hired; managing the budgets allocated to them and 11 reporting on disbursement of funds...in short, fulfilling whatever is required of any person in 12 a staff position.

13
14 Good leadership involves utilizing the best resources in deliberations and decision-making.
15 When sessions include women staff members—such as directors of women's ministries and 16 directors of children's ministries, to name only two—in their meetings, the large majority of 17 the people in churches are then represented by someone who knows and represents them—
18 someone who can give insight into their needs and spiritual maturity, knows how decisions
19 will affect them, and can speak for them. Elders of the session need the help of women staff
20 members, and elders are fulfilling their God-ordained role by encouraging women to offer
21 their gifts to complement the session in their leadership by being present to help them.

22
23 Since the BCO permits any member to attend and observe session meetings when they are 24 not in executive session, technically women can choose to attend session meetings on their 25 own initiative and for no higher motivation than curiosity, though very, very few would do
26 so. It is far better to issue invitations to those women (and laymen) who can actually assist 27 the session by offering gifts such as communication, financial planning, real estate
28 development, and human resources expertise, to name only a few. Invitations to women 29 filling staff positions would of course be expected and encouraged, along with laymen who 30 fill staff positions.

31
32 The committee cannot and does not desire to legislate the working of individual sessions or 33 their relationship with their staff and members. However, the committee encourages sessions
34 in churches that have unordained staff positions to consider hiring qualified women, 35 possibly even before qualified men. The church staff will of necessity have primarily 36 ordained men, and women will never be ordained. Thus, the committee encourages 37 preferring women for non-ordained staff positions, such as director of children's ministry,
38 director of women's ministry, director of adult education/discipleship, treasurer/accountant,
39 administrator, or director of assimilation. This could be desirable for these reasons: it gives 40 qualified women an outlet for their gifts; it encourages PCA women to pursue theological 41 education, knowing that there will be employment options for them to serve; it gives 42 visibility to women who can model mature female leadership; it demonstrates before the 43 watching world that the church is a body that practices biblical inclusion and women are co-
44 heirs of grace.

1 How Can We Affirm Women Who Have Obvious Bible-Teaching Skills?

2
3 When some of the early Christians witnessed the fulfillment of Joel 2:29, “Even on my 4 servants, both men and women, I will pour out my Spirit in those days,” on Pentecost (and
5 subsequent fillings of the Spirit in Acts), their response was to adopt a unisex approach to 6 life and ministry. Paul addresses correctively this approach in his first letter to the 7 Corinthians. God created and continues to uphold the dual gendered roles that He made at 8 creation—male and female. God has also poured out His Spirit on “both men and women”
9 and given gifts meant for the flourishing of Christ’s body and the spread of the good news of 10 the gospel of Jesus Christ.

11
12 Yet, many of the gifts given to women have been overlooked and neglected in their own
13 churches, forcing women either to bury the “talent” that has been given them, or go outside
14 the church to para-church ministries in order to use their gifts.

15
16 While gifts must always be used appropriately within the roles to which women have been 17 called, the local church should actively seek ways to identify and use the gifts of the Holy 18 Spirit that exist within its midst.

19
20 That some of these gifts may be the ability to explain scriptural teaching or theological truth
21 should not surprise or threaten the church leadership where these women attend. There are 22 two schools of thought within the committee:

- 23
24 1) If women are teaching men at the invitation and under the correction of their 25 sessions, the women’s gifts will only enrich the congregation. Some of the 26 committee members do not believe that teaching the Bible carries any juridical 27 authority, since no lay person has the ability to place a person under discipline if 28 they disagree with what is being taught.
- 29 2) There are some who believe that women are not allowed to teach men in a formal, 30 ongoing role of teacher in the local church, but that there are isolated and 31 informal circumstances in which women may share biblical truths with men that 32 will edify the body (e.g., Aquila and Priscilla informally teaching Apollos in Acts 33 18:26). They also believe that because of that restriction, God’s Word would not 34 allow sessions to permit women to teach men in the formal role of teacher in the 35 local church.

36
37 However, within each school of thought, there is agreement that the local session would 38 have oversight to determine the extent and circumstances that they deem appropriate.

39
40 Churches should consider creative ways in which to utilize the teaching gifts of laymen and 41 laywomen in their midst, such as (but not limited to):

- 42
43 • a “Skeptics Welcome” café wherein, once a week, church members invite non-44 believers to bring their questions for informal discussion. A permanent and/or 45 rotating team of apologetically trained men and women who are comfortable

1 talking to unbelievers would be a good place for lay women to assist pastors,
2 elders, or other trained men. In fact, they would be necessary if women attending
3 were to feel comfortable and heard.

- 4 • homeless shelters, refuges for battered women, hospital wards, nursing homes,
5 Christian schools, college fellowships, Mom's groups
- 6 • kids community groups: large group weeknight fellowship for elementary and 7 middle school kids, with music, small group Bible study, crafts, et cetera
- 8 • Women, chosen and supervised by the session, can teach Sunday school classes
9 to adults, midweek Bible study classes (at the church or in homes), or other 10 venues
- 11 • Vacation Bible School and other children's ministries like Fun with Faith and 12 Backyard Bible Clubs
- 13 • Train women to give their personal testimonies as well as to teach the Bible for 14 women's retreats, luncheons, teas, Christmas events, and so forth.

15
16 The primary need is the encouragement and respect of the church's male leadership who can 17 either nourish or break the heart of a woman who is trying to serve God. Encouragement and 18 respect can take the form of ongoing training in teaching, Bible, and theology, sending 19 women to the yearly PCA women's leadership training conferences, and/or encouraging 20 women to take seminary courses, and earn seminary degrees, including offering financial 21 help if possible.

22
23 There is additional benefit to churches finding ways to deploy gifted women teachers in 24 their midst. In a connected world, gifted men and women regularly develop websites and 25 blogs as a platform for instruction. When churches recognize a gifted woman's teaching 26 ministry and incorporate it into the church's ministry, the expansion of that ministry is an 27 expansion of that church. Her web presence could be incorporated into or linked to her
28 church's, where she is blessed to have oversight by a small group of mature men and women
29 advisers from the church who would help her set her schedule, review her teaching, and give 30 her accountability for her ministry.

31
32 Finally, women should find great encouragement in the valuable role of weekly teaching
33 children through Sunday school classes, catechism classes (such as Kid's Quest, etc.), and 34 regular women's Bible studies. These venues of teaching offer inestimable benefit to the 35 kingdom and the growth of believers.

36

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44

CHAPTER FIVE
PASTORAL LETTER AND RECOMMENDATIONS

In His inexhaustible creativity and unfailing purposes, God created man as male and female in His image and after His likeness (Gen. 1:26). As image bearers, humanity has the great privilege and high honor to glorify God by ruling over creation, being fruitful, filling the earth, and cultivating its potential (WSC Q/A 1; Gen. 1:28).

Although sin has marred the image of God in man (Gen. 5:3), the Lord continues to uphold the dual gendered roles that He marvelously made: male and female. This creation order enables humanity to employ its complementary gifts that quite obviously could not be obeyed by a single gender. After all, why else did God say, “It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him a helper fit for him” (Gen. 2:18)?

While the fall has touched and twisted all of creation, God has never revoked His blessings on men and women working together to glorify Him with their obedience, creativity, productivity, and union. In fact, as part of His redemption, God has poured out His Spirit on “both men and women” (Joel 2:28 and Acts 2:17) and has given gifts meant for the flourishing of the body of Christ and the spread of the good news of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

While gifts must always be used appropriately within the roles to which women have been called, it is the committee’s hope that at the local, regional, and national levels, the church would actively seek ways to identify and use all the gifts that the Holy Spirit has given within their midst.

Sadly, not all the women of the PCA have experienced affirmation of their gifts and encouragement to serve the church within the parameters of biblical teaching. Many who fully embrace the Bible’s teaching about complementary gender roles have experienced a climate in the local church more focused on what women cannot do rather than one fostering a biblically informed culture of what women are called to do.

The committee affirms wholeheartedly that the Bible requires women’s gifts to be fully employed within biblical parameters. Anything to the contrary has only wounded the body of Christ, robbed it of many of God’s gifts, and caused outsiders to question the church’s devotion to the Scripture as the only rule of faith and practice. Moving forward, the committee desires to see churches utilize women’s gifts and abilities so that they may, as Westminster Shorter Catechism question 1 says, “Glorify God and enjoy him forever.”

In this letter, the committee hopes to give practical suggestions and encouragement for how ruling and teaching elders, as those with God-ordained headship, may encourage women to use their gifts and talents to serve in biblical ways in the various ministries of their congregation and our denomination, making it possible both for women and for the church to fulfill their callings from the Lord.

1 Recommendations:

- 2
- 3 1. That Overture 3 from Westminster Presbytery, “Declare that the 44th General
- 4 Assembly Erred in the Formation of an Ad Interim Committee on the Role of
- 5 Women as not Being Properly before the Court, and Dismiss the Ad Interim
- 6 Committee with Apology,” be answered in the negative.
- 7
- 8 2. That sessions, presbyteries, and the General Assembly recognize that, from the
- 9 founding of the PCA, there has been a variety of views and practices regarding the
- 10 ways in which women may serve the Lord and the church within scriptural and
- 11 constitutional parameters, without ordination, and that such mutual respect for said
- 12 views and practices continues.
- 13

14 Rationale: The Scriptures and the constitution of the PCA state that offices of the church

15 are only open to qualified and ordained men. But the committee also recognizes that the

16 Scriptures and the constitution of the PCA give freedom to its churches with regard to

17 varying views and practices by its churches in the ways in which women may serve the

18 Lord and the church. This freedom of view and practice has also been part of the PCA’s

19 history. For instance, regarding millennial and creation views, the PCA has enjoyed

20 liberty within confessional parameters. In other denominations, these differences would

21 have been grounds for separation.

22

23 Therefore, the committee recommends that ruling and teaching elders continue this

24 recognition of freedom within PCA churches to utilize women’s gifts within the scriptural

25 and constitutional parameters, without ordination. The committee recommends that such

26 mutual respect for views and practices within these parameters continue. The committee

27 believes this freedom of views and practices within PCA churches where Scripture and

28 the constitution allow for freedom is a strength of the denomination and should be

29 valued by the whole church.

30

- 31 3. That sessions, presbyteries and the General Assembly strive to develop, recognize,
- 32 and utilize the gifts, skills, knowledge, and wisdom of godly women in the local,
- 33 regional, and national church, and particularly consider overtures that would allow
- 34 qualified women to serve on appropriate committees and agencies within the
- 35 church.
- 36

37 Rationale: The Scriptures teach that the Holy Spirit has given gifts to the church for the

38 glory of God and the edification of the church (Rom. 12:3-8; 1 Cor. 12:1-11; Eph. 4:11-

39 16). Churches should strive to identify, develop, recognize, and utilize the gifts, skills,

40 knowledge, and wisdom of all their members. The committee encourages all PCA

41 churches to do so particularly and especially among their godly women members. The

42 committee further encourages PCA churches to utilize the gifts, skills, and knowledge of

43 women by particularly and especially promoting and recruiting qualified women to serve

44 on appropriate committees within the church. Commissions, unlike committees, are

1 elected by governing courts to act on behalf of the governing court and should remain
2 open only to members of the governing court.

3
4 The committee recognizes that many PCA churches, as well as some presbyteries,
5 already strive to utilize qualified women on their committees. Currently, membership of 6 the Committees and Agencies of the PCA's General Assembly are only open to ordained
7 men. Some denominational Boards have women advisory committees. The General
8 Assembly has appointed women to study committees, like the one compiling this report.
9 Currently, however, the PCA's Committees, Boards, and Agencies are only open to 10 ordained men. The committee advises sessions, presbyteries, and the General Assembly
11 to consider making overtures to the General Assembly identifying appropriate 12 Committees and Agencies in which women should serve as members and amending The 13 Book of Church Order to allow women to do so.

- 14
15 4. That sessions, if possible, establish a diaconate of qualified ordained men. Though
16 The Book of Church Order* does not specifically prohibit the practice of going without 17 ordained deacons, it seems poorly aligned with the spirit of the principle of the two 18 church offices outlined in The Book of Church Order.

19
20 Rationale: There is at least anecdotal evidence that some PCA churches are choosing not
21 to establish an ordained diaconate, even with qualified candidates, because the church
22 wishes to be free to establish a body of unordained servants, both male and female (BCO 23 9-7). Yet, the absence of a body of ordained deacons appears to miss the Lord's will for 24 His church, named in several New Testament texts and described in the PCA Book of 25 Church Order.

26
27 First, in Philippians 1:1, Paul addresses the saints, overseers, and deacons of the Philippian
28 church because overseers and deacons led the church together. Second, 1 Timothy 3
29 describes the qualifications of elders and deacons, assuming that a church will have both 30 elders and deacons. He states, regarding deacons, "those who serve well as deacons gain
31 a good standing for themselves and also great confidence in the faith that is in Christ
32 Jesus." Third, in his discussion of elders and deacons, Paul said he wrote that they "may 33 know how one ought to behave [or "conduct oneself"] in the household of God." Finally,
34 the New Testament gift lists mention the gift of service, which a body of seven men had 35 and exercised to great effect in the life of the apostolic church (Acts 6:1-7).

36
37 Therefore, with sound biblical warrant, BCO 9-4 begins, "The deacons of a particular 38 church shall be organized as a Board." The imperative sense of the verb has historically 39 been construed as a mandate with a limited caveat: a new or small church may not have 40 enough trained leaders to ordain both elders and deacons. But the PCA's agreed upon 41 polity acknowledges the importance of the work of the deacon in the local church.

1 5. That sessions consider how to include non-ordained men and women in the worship
 2 of the church so as to maintain faithfulness to Scripture, as well as utilizing the gifts
 3 God has poured out to His entire church (see exegesis of 1 Corinthians 14:26 in 4 Chapter Two).

5
 6 Rationale: Within a complementarian framework, there is substantial, non-controversial
 7 opportunity for non-ordained men and women to participate in the leadership of a
 8 worship service, in the spirit of 1 Corinthians 14:26.

9
 10 Some examples of how a session might implement this follow. First, in music, a session
 11 might allow men and women to lead congregational or choral singing. Second, men and 12 women may "stir up one another to love and good deeds" (Heb. 10:24) by describing the 13 value of upcoming ministries of mercy and disciple-making. Third, men and women
 14 might promote corporate worship by testifying or praising God for the favor He shows to 15 ministries of the church. Fourth, granting that many sessions are convinced that a
 16 pastoral prayer and a prayer for the illumination of Scripture are reserved for elders, men
 17 and women might lead other prayers of petition or praise. Fifth, within the parameters of 18 Larger Catechism 156, the session might authorize various persons to read Scripture.
 19 Granting that many sessions are convinced that the reading of the Scripture before the 20 sermon is part of the sermon, there are other occasions to read Scripture in worship
 21 liturgies, such as responsive readings. Sixth, non-ordained men and women might make 22 doxological announcements (praise for the work of God in a local congregation) or bring 23 greetings that encourage the body (Heb. 3:13).

24
 25 6. BCO 9-7 says: "It is often expedient that the Session of a church should select and 26 appoint godly men and women of the congregation to assist the deacons in caring for the 27 sick, the widows, the orphans, the prisoners, and others who may be in any distress or 28 need. These assistants to the deacons are not officers of the church (BCO 7-2) and, as 29 such, are not subjects for ordination (BCO 17)." Thus, for the well-being of the church, 30 the committee recommends that sessions and presbyteries select and appoint godly
 31 women of the congregation to assist the ordained leadership; these godly, unordained
 32 women have often historically been referred to as deaconesses.

33
 34 Rationale: BCO 9-7 presently provides for sessions to recognize the unordained women
 35 laboring in diaconal work alongside ordained deacons. These women have been given a 36 variety of names, job descriptions, and roles (within the parameters of Scripture and the 37 confession), and thus, it is appropriate for sessions to establish the role of unordained
 38 deaconess to assist the deacons in their labors.

39
 40 A way to recognize these women, following training and testing, is through commissioning.
 41 Commissioning is a general term, used for occasions when people are set apart for a 42 particular task, usually accompanied by public prayer.

43
 44 This action is practiced already in many, if not most, PCA churches, to set apart and pray
 45 for those embarking on missionary endeavors, (life-time or short-term) or anyone being

1 sent out for a particular task, such as an evangelistic team, Vacation Bible School
2 leaders, or other occasions.

3
4 The minutes of the PCA’s First General Assembly in 1973 record the commissioning of 5 six missionaries, three men and three women. The minutes record:

6
7 The following new National Presbyterian Church missionaries were 8 presented and commissioned in a service in which Ruling Elder Gerald 9 Sovereign led in prayer, Ruling Elder Roger DeHaven read Scripture, and 10 Teaching Elder Will McIlwaine pronounced the benediction: Mr. and Mrs.
11 [Marie] John Lynch, Rev. Cecilio Woody Lajara, Dr. and Mrs. [Rebecca]
12 Peter Jones, and Miss Ellen [Sue] Barnett (MIGA, 1973, item 1-56, p. 37).

13
14 Note that the term “commissioned” is used. Messrs. Lajara and Jones were already ordained
15 teaching elders. The minutes do not reflect whether Mr. Lynch was unordained, or if he 16 were an ordained ruling elder or deacon. Mrs. Lynch, Mrs. Jones, and Miss Barnett were 17 not ordained. The General Assembly publicly commissioned all six people as 18 missionaries, those who were ordained along with those who were not ordained.

19
20 7. That presbyteries and the General Assembly consider an overture that would 21 establish formally the right of sessions, presbyteries, and the General Assembly to 22 establish the position of commissioned church worker within the PCA for qualified 23 and gifted unordained men and women.

24
25 Rationale: Presbyterianism in America has, in the past, recognized the need to set apart
26 qualified women and men for service in the church outside of licensure and ordination.
27 This was accomplished by establishing the category of commissioned church worker.
28 For example, the 1938 PCUSA Digest describes the qualifications and requirements for 29 people desiring to serve as a commissioned church worker in similar manner to licensure
30 and ordination candidates. However, it clearly states, “the status of Commissioned 31 Church Worker is never to be considered as having any relationship to or association
32 with licensure, or ordination...nor does this status, when received, confer any ministerial 33 rights and privileges.”

34
35 The committee believes that this category could potentially address a number of issues in 36 the PCA. While it would not represent an office, it would recognize those whose lives
37 have been given in service to the body. An unordained man or woman would have to 38 receive advanced training and experience appropriate to their area of service.

39
40 This category would be a way to recognize trained and committed staff members who 41 were making service to the church their life’s work. This benefit for commissioned 42 church workers may redress an inequity in compensation that mostly affects women,
43 who are in non- licensed and non-ordained full-time ministry
44 (<https://www.irs.gov/taxtopics/tc417.html>).

1 The commissioning service for this work could be done in a manner distinct from an
 2 ordination service, in order to emphasize deliberately that it is NOT ordination, thus
 3 protecting ordination to ruling and teaching elders as a qualified-male-only calling.
 4

5 The committee believes that commissioned church worker is a category that is long
 6 overdue in the PCA. Again, while it would not represent an office, it would recognize 7 people whose lives have been given to serve in the body. The committee favors adding
 8 this as a category in the PCA, not an office. The category would carry no authority, 9 merely recognition. No BCO changes would be necessary. The category could apply to 10 deaconesses, women staff members who have theological degrees, or others as 11 determined by the General Assembly.
 12

13 8. That sessions, presbyteries and the General Assembly consider how they can affirm
 14 and include underprivileged and underrepresented women in the PCA.
 15

16 Rationale: After Jesus rose from the dead, He commanded His apostles: “Therefore, go 17 make disciples of all nations” (Matt. 28:18). Jesus, our great King, prescribes the 18 mission of His church, which, in part, is to ensure the nations become His disciples (cf.
 19 WCF 7.6). The overflow of the Great Commission is revealed in Acts. The names in 20 Acts 13:1 demonstrate that Jesus’ disciples took His commission seriously. Indeed, people
 21 from different ethnic backgrounds were coming to faith in Christ. Unfortunately, the 22 PCA, though it upholds the mandate to make disciples of the nations, has yet to see the 23 demographics in diverse communities reflected in local churches. Therefore, as the PCA
 24 considers the Great Commission afresh, local churches should affirm that intentionally
 25 reaching the nations in their communities is not an addition to the church’s ministry. It is 26 a demand, even command, by Jesus as a principle part of their church’s ministry.
 27

28 Acts 6:1-7 sets precedent for affirming the underprivileged. Whether male or female,
 29 everyone deserved equal treatment in Christ’s church (cf. Jas. 2:1-13). Perhaps one of 30 the greatest examples of the underprivileged being included and affirmed in God’s 31 kingdom is seen in the life of Mary, the mother of Jesus (Luke 2:24). To use today’s 32 language, her family was not middle class, yet she participated in the church in a unique,
 33 yet honorable and God-glorifying manner (cf. 1 Tim. 2:15). The committee affirms, 34 therefore, that even if women are in a lower tax bracket, they are to be embraced as 35 valuable, of equal dignity and worth, and included in various ministries of the church.
 36

37 9. The committee humbly requests to be dismissed with thanks.
 38
 39

40 NOTE: The Study Committee adopted the foregoing report by a vote of 6-1, with the ● 41 dissenting vote by TE Jeffrey Choi. ●