

Job Description for Pastor

Job Description: Pastor to an established congregation whose pastor is retiring this fiscal year.

While serving as pastor, areas of emphasis would include:

- Weekly, expository preaching, with doctrinal depth, which edifies the saints but is also accessible to new and non-believers.
- Shepherding and discipling the congregation through ministries such as, but not limited to, small group, visiting the sick, elderly, and shut-ins, praying for wayward souls, and giving of wise counsel.
- Encouraging congregational gospel outreach to the local community through exhortation and personal example.
- Offering a periodic course of evangelistic training for congregation which could be in the form of a sermon series, Sunday School course, or other special event. This type of event should also include teaching on how to pray evangelistically and regularly.
- Providing encouragement and accountability for church members to engage evangelistically with those around them, building relationships and meeting needs.
- Limited administrative tasks.

Qualifications:

- Male, aged late twenties to mid-forties.
- A tangible track record evidencing a gift and passion for lifestyle evangelism.
- Seminary degree required.
- Married preferred, but singles will also be considered.

Salary: up to $70K total compensation package for full-time, depending on experience.
