

Cornerstone Presbyterian Church is a congregation which has been here for a short time, but its roots go back to two congregations which saw each other across one corn field. Until 2016, it was West Friesland and Faith Presbyterian Churches. As years passed, both congregations left the denomination where their early roots had been because they each observed ways that their denominational home had drifted from the Gospel and both landed in the denomination of the Presbyterian Church of America. Knowing that it is by God's grace we are saved, and by his grace we live each day, we are looking ahead for how we can follow Him closely and serve Him faithfully.

We are seeking a pastor who will serve as the shepherd of this congregation in rural Iowa, a man who will preach faithfully and teach clearly from God's word, leading us in worship each week, will be available to those in times of need, and will help the Session in planning how together we can faithfully serve our Lord. One who will help oversee the involvement of this church in ministry to this community and live as an example of what it means to seek to follow Christ more faithfully today than yesterday and more closely tomorrow than today.

As the church continues to reach out with the Good News of the Gospel, we are praying for a man who will encourage us and challenge us as we step out to follow the Lord, who will pray for us and who will love us.

We want a pastor who will help us work together in a way which will glorify our Lord. Because we live in a world which is constantly changing, we seek a pastor who will help us choose wisely what things stay the same and which changes will help us serve our Lord together in a world which alters so quickly.
